QUEER FADS of SOCIETY LEADERS— No. 1.

MRS. GOELET SKETCHING AT NEWPORT.

HER CLEVER CARICATURE OF JAMES HAZEN HYDE—OF SOCIETY AND INSURANCE FAME.

MRS. ROBERT GOELET.

MRS GOELET'S FUNNY SKETCH OF HARRY LEHR AND HIS MONKEY.

Mrs. Robert W. Goelet's Awfully Funny Caricatures of the Smart Set.

IF Mrs. Bobby Goelet hadn't married the richest bachelor in New York she undoubtedly would have been a very successful artist. There was never any doubt in Philadelphia about the brains of the Whelens, from whom she springs, and in all the family the artistic strain is strong, whether it shows itself in the pen or the brush.

But Mrs. Elsie Whelen Goelet's artistic passion runs a gamut. There are peaceful landscapes, there are vivid, impressionistic, glowing, symbolic things, and then there are—and these are really what count—the quaintest, most delightful, most satirical caricatures of the world of fashion in which she moves.

In Mrs. Goelet's rose boudoir there is a drawer that is seldom unlocked when any one but Mrs. Goelet is there. In it is a big flat book with a cover on which a grotesque is holding a mirror and dancing. On it is simply the legend—"Things as they aren't. BUT ought to be."

It is Mrs. Goelet's private and intimate—most intimate—book of drawings and if Newport could see it Newport, or a great part of it, would rise in social revolution. Across its pages dance the eccentricities of New

THE LAST MAD DREAMS OF Aubrey Beardsley

"THE EYES OF HEROD," A SYMBOLICAL ILLUSTRATION.

SOME new pictures by Aubrey Beardsley, the most brilliant, strange, whimsical and perverse artist ever produced by the English race, are published as illustrations of "Salome," Oscar Wilde's tragedy in one act.

The work is issued by John Lane, the publisher, of London and New York.

"Salome" was originally written by Oscar Wilde in French. Sarah Bernhardt planned to play it in England, but it was prohibited by the censor. It was written in a curiously simple French, intended to suggest Oriental forms of speech, and some English critics wisely remarked that it was poor school-boy French. Thereupon several eminent Frenchmen wrote to say that it was wonderfully correct French, and they marvelled that any one but a Frenchman could have produced such a work. Since then it has been translated into nearly every European language, and played. It has been acted more frequently in Germany than the work of any English author except Shakespeare.

There are sixteen illustrations by Aubrey Beardsley in this edition. Some of them are already familiar, but others are not. The new pictures are the last work of the strange, half-mad artistic genius, who like Wilde ended his misspent life in great misery.

It is a deplorable fact that some of the newly published pictures by Beardsley are absolutely unfit for publication in their present form. They should certainly have been suppressed, if it were not possible to change them. They are the last creations of diseased and utterly unbridled imagination. In certain details, the nature of which cannot even be hinted at here, they are unspeakably vile, but apart from these blemishes they are admirable from the standpoint of design and decorative effect. On the other hand some of the drawings are quite free from objectionable features and they all exhibit in a high degree the remarkable artistic qualities which the unfortunate artist possessed.

The story of "Salome" is little more than a repetition of the Biblical narrative which relates how Salome, the daughter of Herodias and step-daughter of King Herod, danced before the King and pleased him so greatly that he offered her any reward she chose to ask. "even to the half of my kingdom," whereupon she demanded the head of St. John the Baptist on a charger. The play assumes that Salome hated St. John the Baptist because he had spurned her wicked allurements. Aubrey Beardsley illustrates the play with a whimsical disregard of its statements and chronology.

port. There is no one keener to the ridiculous or the caricaturable than hers. As the men and women of what we are pleased to call the "Four Hundred" come with her box, she scribes for a while and impales them, in her "caught-in-the-graphy," as she calls it. No one could possibly mistake who it is. Though she uses there of a certain high name in bathing attire which would be worth its size at diamonds to that same matron's social agencies. Yet there is no touch of malice in those grotesques—all is simply delicate laughter. Nevertheless, Mrs. Goelet shows that she took to very severe training material in it for more social fruits than Newport could hold. Opening Newport and its "smart set" would suffer sardonic.

"You can know why I like you so well, Mr. Lehr?" said Mrs. Goelet one day to the effervescent Harry.

"Because I am brilliant," said Harry.

"Not at all," said Mrs. Goelet. "Because every time I draw you it's fresher than the last."

In the delicate satire of her grotesques and their stealing drollery, in her depth and knowledge of the follies of the people about her, in her sympathy with them even while she mocks them, there is the evidence of the real brilliancy of this very clever young matron.

Yet a French author, writing of Mrs. Goelet's yachting party at Venice, wrote: "She entertained the whole party, hostess included, wholly devoid of artistic emotion or appreciation of Venice as it appears with its thousands of enthralling lights at night. After describing that scene as a "fairyland of ancient beauty," the writer says:

Before the great yacht Nahma, a floating palace of unheeded luxury, lounged, with their heads in their pockets, and bored to death, the guests of Mrs. Goelet. They make no movement and never turn their heads to see the wonders that pass before their weary eyes. They are mirrorless blokes, and nothing can move them in their perfect evening dress.

"The invited flunkeys bend respectfully aloof and are not more susceptible to the seduction of Venice by moonlight than are their employers, the weary, dreary guests of the yacht Nahma."

In spite of this diatribe, we know that Mrs. Bobby Goelet is not only a sensitive and sympathetic artist but an extraordinary woman though she may, if she pleases, spend $5,000 every day of her life.

As Miss Elsie Whelen, of Philadelphia, she was famous for both her paintings and her sewing. Some called her "the modern Penelope."

Her trousseau was a marvel of dainty elegance, and much of it showed the results of the needle in her deft fingers. Her artistic sense was shown in original designs for lingerie and outer garments, and in the execution her needle was not less expert.

It is said that to this day Mrs. Goelet finds her chief delight, outside the round of her social duties, in going from her room to her work basket and back again. As she sews her mind is free to conceive new triumphs for her brush, and when the brush tires her she can go back, for rest and for fresh inspiration, to the sewing basket.

The public results—to the society world at large—are her satirings. And so paint and sew, more than sewing, is celebrated as the end of Mrs. Bobby Goelet.

putting Salome in modern dress when it pleases him.

The play passes in the banqueting hall of Herod's palace. The Princess Salome is seen and a young Syrian on the balcony says to a soldier:

"How beautiful is the Princess Salome to-night. * * * She is like a little Princess who wears a yellow veil and whose feet are of silver. She is like a Princess who has little white doves for feet. You would fancy she was dancing."

Jokanaan (St. John the Baptist, who is imprisoned in a cistern, is heard crying:

"After me shall come another mightier than I. I am not worthy so much as to unloose the latchet of his shoes. When he cometh the solitary places shall be glad. They shall blossom like the lily. The eyes of the blind shall see the day and the ears of the deaf shall be opened. The new-born child shall put his hand upon the dragon's lair, he shall lead the lions by their manes."

Salome is fascinated by his voice and speaks to him and hears him denounce her mother. Salome falls in love with him. She says:

"How wasted he is! He is like a thin ivory statue. He is like an image of silver. I am sure he is chaste as the moon is. He is like a moonbeam ,like a shaft of silver. His flesh must be cool like ivory. * * *

"Jokanaan, I am amorous of thy body! thy body is white like the lilies of a field that the mowers have never mowed. Thy body is white like the snows that lie on the mountains, like the snows that lie on the mountains of Judaea, and come down into the valleys. The roses in the garden of the Queen of Arabia are not so white as thy body. Neither, the roses in the garden of the Queen of Arabia, the perfumed garden of spices of the Queen of Arabia, nor the feet of the dawn when they light on the leaves, nor the breast of the moon, when she lies on the breast of the sea. * * * There is nothing in the world so white as thy body. Let me touch thy body."

Jokanaan leaves her, saying:

"I will not look at thee, thou art accursed, Salome, thou are accursed."

Herod and Herodias enter. The King looks too lovingly at Salome, and Herodias reproves him. He implores Salome to dance for him. She refuses, but he wins her consent by offering her any reward she may ask, "even the half of my kingdom."

Salome dances the dance of the seven veils, and Herod cries:

"Ah! Wonderful! wonderful. You see that she has danced for me, your daughter. Come near, Salome; come near, that I may give you your reward. Ah! I pay the dancers well. I will give thee whatsoever thy soul desireth. What wouldst thou have? Speak."

Salome (kneeling): "I would that they presently bring me in a silver charger"——

Herod (laughing): "In a silver charger! Surely yes. In a silver charger. She is charming, is she not? What will you have in a silver charger, O sweet and fair Salome, you who are fairer than all the daughters of Judaea? What would thou have them bring thee in a silver charger? Tell me. Whatsoever it may be, they shall give it thee. My treasure belong to thee. What is it, Salome?"

Salome (rising): "The head of Jokanaan."

In a brief space her wicked love has changed to murderous hate, because the prophet has repulsed her.

Herod pleads with Salome to take anything rather than the head of Jokanaan, who, he says, is perchance a prophet sent from God, but the woman persists and he yields. This is the climax of the drama:

"A huge black arm, the arm of the executioner, comes forth from the cistern, bearing on a silver shield the head of Jokanaan. Salome takes it. Herod hides his face with his cloak. Herodias smiles and fans herself. The Nazarenes fall on their knees and begin to pray.

Then Salome picks up the severed head and says:

"Ah! thou wouldst not suffer me to kiss thy mouth, Jokanaan. Well! I will kiss it now. I will bite it with my teeth as one bites a ripe fruit. Yes, I will kiss thy mouth, Jokanaan; I said it. Did I not say it? I said it. Ah! I will kiss it. * * * But wherefore dost thou not look at me? Art thou afraid of me, Jokanaan, that thou will not look at me? * * * And thy tongue that was like a red snake darting poison, it moves no more, it says nothing now, Jokanaan, that scarlet viper that spat its venom upon me. It is strange, is it not? How is it that the red viper stirs no longer? * * * Thou wouldst have none of me, Jokanaan. Thou didst reject me. Thou didst speak evil words against me. Thou didst treat me as a wanton; me, Salome, daughter of Herodias, Princess of Judaea! Well! Jokanaan, I still live, but thou—thou art dead. And thy head belongs to me. I can do with it what I will. I can throw it to the dogs, and to the birds of the air. * * *"

Finally Herod, wearied and frightened by her brutality and blasphemy, calls to his soldiers:

"Kill that woman!"

The stage directions say:

"The soldiers rush forward and crush beneath their shields Salome, daughter of Herodias, Princess of Judaea."

The final illustration by Aubrey Beardsley is a whimsical picture of the devil and an assistant depositing the dead body of Salome in a coffin which is an enlarged face-powder box.

SNAPSHOT OF MRS. POTTER PALMER, AND HER BEAUTIFUL PROTEGE, MISS ITALIA BLAIR, MAKING AN AFTERNOON ROUND OF CALLS IN MRS. PALMER'S VICTORIA, IN CHICAGO.

Chicago Gives its Most Dazzling Beauty to a Prince of Rome.

How Lovely Italia Blair, Travelling In Europe With Mrs. Potter Palmer, Was Besieged Everywhere By Scores of Noble Suitors, and Was Finally Won by the Rich and Handsome Prince Antonio Della Rampigia, of Italy's Royal House.

NEVERMORE mention Chicago and the Beef Trust in the same breath.

Henceforth she is to be absolved from all the infamies heaped up in "The Jungle," for she has redeemed herself in the most glorious manner imaginable.

One of her fair daughters is to be a princess—almost a princess of the blood!

Not because she is rich and the prince is poor. That might happen anywhere. The great triumph for Chicago lies in the fact that she is to produce an innovation—a departure from the routine of international marriages—in which money is the smallest consideration.

Beauty—beauty so radiant and unappreciable that poets and painters of the Old World, having once beheld it, seek no further for their ideal, walks proud heirs to crowns and coronets, finding themselves unable to possess it upon any terms, run away to Africa to sell their blasted lives dearly in mortal combat with tigers and elephants, or to lay it down before the wine when it is red in the cup, or the Bureur when it is green in the frappe—that is about all that the prince will get with this Chicago lass—just beauty.

Italia Blair and Her Prince.

You must not imagine that these superlative charms were not recognized in Chicago. Less than a year ago half the gilded youth of that city were prostrate before them.

But soon Mrs. Potter Palmer—who is a feminine Sir Hubert, not only in Chicago, but in London and Paris and in every great European city—and she seized and bore away this pearl beyond price to dazzle with it the amazed eyes of royalty.

And just how Chicago learns that through the spell of one of her many fair daughters all her unfragrant past is forgiven and forgotten. This cannot be doubted after one has read this letter from abroad written to a Chicago friend by Mrs. Barclay Chancellor, of Philadelphia:

"You remember that stunning girl, Italia Blair, of Chicago, about whom everybody was raving in Venice, Naples and St. Moritz. She was with Mrs. Palmer as a guest during an automobile tour through France and Italy. The latest news about her is her engagement to Prince Antonio Della Rampigia, a relative by marriage to the royal family, and one of the most dashing cavalry officers in the Italian army.

"He was with the Duke of Abruzzi when he went mountain climbing in Alaska. I've seen him, and you may believe me that a handsomer young man I never met, and he is as rich as he is handsome and noble. He is a special favorite of the King's, so you will realize that Italia is a very fortunate girl.

"The young Prince seems to be hopelessly in love, and he had a battle royal with plenty of other ardent wooers. One young fellow, also an Italian but not of the blood royal, made a big scene when Italia first gave him the mitten, and threatened to kill himself. He kept after the poor girl, persistently followed her about everywhere, and she was dreadfully afraid that he might keep his promise and put an end to his life. He didn't do anything so reckless. Indeed, when he found out that Prince Antonio had cut him out he ran away to Paris, and when we were there last week we heard dreadful stories about his conduct. Absinthe, and all that sort of thing, you know.

"Mrs. Palmer wants the marriage to take place at her home in London, but, of course, that is scarcely possible, as the prince's family is very likely to insist on a big church wedding, with a Cardinal to officiate.

"You have no idea what a great hit Miss Blair has made. Wherever she has gone all the men simply raved over her beauty. She was in constant demand at all sorts of entertainments. It was the same thing in Italy, France and England. No other girl stood any chance while Miss Blair was around.

"She could have had a dozen offers of marriage a week from high-born men if she had given them encouragement to declare themselves. But, to give her credit, she kept them all at as great a distance as possible until she met Prince Antonio, who would not be denied if she could, and she couldn't deny him if she would. He has followed her here to London, and in two weeks she is going to visit his mother and sisters in Rome.

"I need not tell you how delighted I am over the engagement. It is a splendid tribute to the attractiveness of the girls from dear old Chicago. We probably wont hear so many contemptuous references to the Packingtown brand of tinned Americans hereafter."

The marvel of it all is that wherever Miss Blair wended her triumphant way in Europe, walking upon the necks of royal and noble suitors, never was there a question about her fortune. In her presence filthy lucre was forgotten—all thought of money banished by beauty!

Was there ever a case like it when an American girl has been the heroine?

In London the celebrated painter, Burne Jones, pronounced Miss Blair to be the fairest of her sex. For once in the making of such a verdict beautiful women were not classified according to nationality. It had remained for Italia Blair, of Chicago, to sweep aside all considerations of race or country or type. She was simply the most beautiful of all her sex.

The truth about her family is that while her father, Chauncey J. Blair, is not rated as a millionaire, the family home on fashionable Drexel Boulevard is one of the finest on the South Side, and has been the scene of some of the most charming social functions of the town.

From time to time there have been dribblets of news about the triumphal tour of Mrs. Potter Palmer and her lovely protegee on the European continent. Mrs. Palmer is a well known expert in such matters. She could be trusted to keep all undesirable suitors at a distance.

A Love Tournament in Autos.

Ever since Mrs. Palmer served as President of the Board of Lady Managers of the World's Fair at Chicago, where foreigners of great social worth found her eminently one of their own kind, she has kept up her associations with the flower of society abroad, which means that royal and noble doors have always remained open to her.

Beautiful Italia Blair could not have had a more wisely-chosen chaperon. She was relieved of all worry and responsibility about whom to meet and to like. Mrs. Palmer saw to all that, and this meant that among the eligible men whom the beauty met, none but the very most eligible had any sort of opportunity to pursue her with their devotion.

However, the eligibles numbered scores, and with most of these the valiant Prince Antonio had to strive with might and main before he attained first place.

If the Prince had been too poor to maintain an automobile of the finest and swiftest pattern his cause would have been lost at the start. For much of the continental tour of Mrs. Palmer and her protegee was made in the chaperon's car, a veritable gazelle on wheels, and pretty nearly the equal for speed of any of the railway trains in that country.

The Prince was compelled to burn gasoline quite regardless of expense, and there was one of his rivals, also in a fleet close touring car, with an equal contempt for the cost of his quest for the lovely Chicagoan's hand.

The name of this suitor does not appear in any of the accounts of this remarkable auto chase after the prize American beauty. He is said to have met his Waterloo when the caravan of lady and suitors had climbed out of Italy into France and were resting in a charming chateau town.

It was here that, maddened by the spectacle of the prince having plainly the inside track in the race, the rival resorted to desperate measures. Managing to find Miss Blair alone for a few minutes he protested his devotion in the most extravagant terms, falling upon his knees and begging her to marry him and save his life.

"But I do not love you, sir," said the frightened girl.

"You shall love me or I die," exclaimed the crazed suitor, drawing a pistol from his pocket.

It was then that Miss Blair showed her independent and really fearless Western spirit. Her answer is quoted thus, as she drew herself up and flashed an indignant glance at the man at her feet:

"Very well, sir. I do not see it my duty to save your life at the expense of my future happiness. I wish you good day." And she walked away.

Drowning Himself in Drink.

That was the last seen of this suitor. But later gossip had it that, on second thought, he had decided not to shed his own blood, but to find death in the longer and pleasanter path of wine, women and song in Paris which, at last accounts, he was electrifying at a speed even more rapid than that with which he had pursued Miss Blair out of Italy into France.

As a Princess, Italia Blair will be mistress of a palace in Rome and of a villa back in the vine-clad hills that is also really a palace—for this Italian place, strange to say, is rich, besides being seat of a very old family. These palaces are modern affair, in their walls and in their store of art treasures the dreams romance of the middle ages. The Princess who is brought home to them will feel herself at once a part of this, with a direct connection with the royalty of the past, when to be royal was to be set far apart and above the rest of humanity by divine right.

"Italia"—who would have thought when the little Chicago girl was christened that her name would ever possess such significance? Even her beauty seems to partake of the country for which she is named and whither she will go as a bride. She has dark eyes, a complexion with an olive tint in it, and great masses of smokey black hair, and her lips have the red of Italian roses. Also she has the languid grace characteristic of well-born Italian beauties. "Italia"—indeed a significant and fortunate name.

Chicago—indeed, all America—will await with the utmost keen of the marriage of this American girl, who becomes Princess by the divine right of beauty alone.

MISS ITALIA BLAIR.

MRS. POTTER PALMER.

A Few Words of Advice to the Buyers of Wedding Gifts.

SUE was a happy bride, but pride and perplexity mingled in her expression as she exhibited a huge assortment of miscellaneous silverware and trinkets to the friend who had been married two years.

"Nine pickle forks, six fish carvers, twenty-six candlesticks, and goodness only knows how many jelly spoons," she breathlessly narrated. "Besides a whole lot of manicure tools, paper knives, nests, blotter holders, and small silver things of which I can't even guess the purpose. I thought perhaps you'd help me find out what a few of them are meant for while I pack them up to take home to mother."

The two years' matron smiled sympathetically as the bride poured into her lap the puzzling presents.

"These five odd little implements," she began, "are for lifting butter-balls from the serving plate to your own. For a small family you're thoroughly well supplied. This is a spoon for serving—things—with, and these"—bunching the remaining lot together contemptuously—"are 'beautiful gifts.'"

Above vivid blushes the eyes of the bride twinkled.

"That's what I called them in the acknowledgments," she admitted. "None of the family knew what half the things were called.

"And then there are so many things of other kinds. Towel cases, and embroidered wrappers for housekeeping articles I haven't got, and never expect to have, for that matter, and fussy fixings for the bathroom, and"——

"And vases that wont hold water," the listener interrupted, "and useless little after-dinner coffee spoons and sugar tongs that nobody could use without breaking, and gilt books that nobody will ever look at, and pictures that would be out of place in the kitchen, and all sorts of bric-a-brac that you'll never find a place for, and——" But what's the use of making a catalogue?

"I know all about it," she went on. "Haven't I got a huge packing case up in mother's attic filled with just such lumber? It was almost worth while having that horrible attack of typhoid fever just for a chance to send all the things away.

"You'd better do so at once, my dear, if you want to find your early married life worth living. Console yourself with the thought that it's really the feeling at the back of the gift that we value. But don't, unless you wish to become a raving maniac, attempt to put all your funny little wedding presents to actual use."

A sensible woman writer not long since appealed to her gift-giving sisters to use common sense and the golden rule in selecting presents.

What Would You Do With a Boy Like This?

How Crown Prince George Has Rattled Around Europe, Leaving a Trail of Wild Escapades, Until His Father, the King of Servia, Can't Sleep for Dread of What the Boy Will Do Next.

He Uses the Crown In a High-Kicking Competition with the Girls.

Belgrade, Sept. 27.

THE king of Servia is the most worried monarch, perhaps the most worried man, in the world today.

His latest trouble arises from an incorrigible bad boy, who plays drunken antics before the entire public and brings the royal dignity into contempt.

Even without this the King would be sufficiently worried. He was placed on the throne by men who murdered his predecessor, and he is required by the great powers of Europe to punish these assassins, upon whom he is dependent not only for his possession of the crown, but for being permitted to remain alive. This is only one of many problems and dilemmas that confront the unfortunate King Peter. He is better able to endure them than most men would be, for he comes of a family that has been accustomed to assassination, exile and starvation for centuries.

The behavior of the King's son, the Crown Prince George, is the worst trial of all. There is a certain gloomy dignity about a King who goes in danger of assassination and the plots of secret conspirators, but life is hardly worth living for a King who is made ridiculous in public by his heir, and when engaged in the most solemn ceremonies is disturbed by the spectacle of that son carousing with low companions.

Trying on the Crown.

The case of King Peter and his son bears a singularly close resemblance to that of Henry IV. of England and his son, Prince Hal, as set forth in Shakespeare's play, "King Henry IV." It will be remembered that the Prince pained his father by spending his days and nights with Falstaff, Bardolph, Poins, Doll Tearsheet and other riotous companions in low taverns in Cheapside and elsewhere. Prince George of Servia has been doing exactly the same thing, with modern variations. The resemblance between the two Princes has been carried so far that Prince George has actually repeated the action of Prince Henry in trying on his father's crown, an action that called forth the great speech of the dying English King:

"I stay too long by thee, I weary thee.
Dost thou so hunger for mine empty chair
That thou wilt needs invest thee with my honors
Before thy hour be ripe? O foolish youth,
Thou seek'st the greatness that will overwhelm thee."

The Crown Prince of Servia recently introduced a party of his actress friends and boon companions into the royal palace by way of the back door. They consumed many bottles of champagne, drank themselves into a state of hilarious intoxication, danced the can-can and performed many mad pranks. Determined to outdo all his companions in wildness the Crown Prince broke into the room where the royal regalia is kept and took possession of the new crown which was designed for King Peter by his artistic cousin in Paris.

The drunken boy gathered his companions around him in the throne room and put on the crown with an irreverent mockery of the ceremony and language used by his father on the occasion of his coronation.

"I hereby pledge my word," began the Prince, "to maintain and enforce the sacred rights of the Servian people to drink as much as they want to and amuse themselves in any way that pleases them."

When he grew tired of this mock ceremony he held up the crown and invited the girls to take part in a high-kicking contest. He offered a diamond tiara to the girl who made the best kick at the crown.

Several high court officials saw what was going on and attempted to interfere, but the Prince ordered them to be arrested for high treason.

"Away with the caitiffs to the deepest dungeon of the castle," he said, as nearly as one can translate the Servian idiom. "They shall be drowned in wine or tickled to death. We will announce our pleasure later."

The court officials were then thrown out of the room. The King himself came in Skuptchina, or the National Parliament is called, in his robes of state and accompanied by a procession composed of everything pompous and picturesque that the Servian Kingdom could furnish. At the moment when the procession reached the most important public square in Belgrade it was met by an open carriage containing the Crown Prince in a state of intoxication, accompanied by a number of his frivolous friends. They were performing the wildest tricks.

"Three cheers for the old man," yelled the shameless Prince. "Be a king, dad! Give 'em hot stuff!"

The offending vehicle was led away by the police, but not before practically the whole population of Belgrade had witnessed this shocking spectacle.

The King's difficulties with his son reached a serious point last Winter. The King naturally wished that his heir should have a good military education, because Servia is a fierce and turbulent country, and the position of any prominent man in it, whether King or politician, must depend chiefly upon his fighting ability. The Prince had a military tutor, a very capable and scientific French officer named Major Lavasseur. The Major attached great importance to making the Prince study the textbooks of military science, but the Prince, while he was interested in drill, fencing and other military exercises, had no inclination for books.

One day he told the Major that he would read no more. The officer endeavored to exercise his authority and the Prince in reply threw first an ink bottle and then a stool at him. The Major complained to the King, who was so enraged by his son's conduct that he proceeded to inflict corporal punishment upon him on the spot.

The boy was slight, but strong and active. The old man was much heavier and also strong and active, with hard muscles inherited from a race of fighting mountaineers. The boy dodged, the King struggled with him and after a severe effort he succeeded in getting his son down on the floor. He then called for a cane and administered a severe thrashing in the place where he believed it would do most good and no harm.

After this the Crown Prince was locked up in solitary confinement and kept on bread and water. He broke out of prison and one afternoon Belgrade was amused to see him running down the principal street followed by the guard. He was caught, but after he came out of prison he proved quite unrepentant, for almost the first thing he did after being released was to make a bonfire of his military books. Major Lavasseur threw up his post in disgust and returned to Paris.

The spectacle of a King licking the Crown Prince was obviously one that was derogatory to the dignity of the Crown and could not be repeated frequently. It would become more difficult with every repetition, for the Prince was constantly growing heavier and stronger. It was, moreover, quite useless, for it had no improving effect on the Prince. King Peter then began to despair of doing anything with him.

The Crown Prince's familiarity with the members of the theatrical profession is a matter of despair to his father. The actresses of the Royal Theatre and the ballet girls of the Royal Opera House are his constant companions.

His first serious infatuation was with Mademoiselle Dechanska, a very pretty actress of the Royal Theatre. One evening he handed her an enormous bunch of flowers over the footlights before the entire audience. This was more than the King could stand, and he ordered the young woman to be escorted beyond the frontier by the police. The Prince heard that she was in Vienna and ran away after her. It is understood that they went through some sort of a marriage ceremony in a little hotel at Meyerling, outside of Vienna, where the Crown Prince of Austria was killed.

Yacha Nenadovitch, the King's cousin and private secretary, with a force of secret police, went after the couple in hot haste and kidnaped the Prince. He gave the actress a sum of money and warned her to leave that part of Europe. She failed to do so, and in a few days her dead body was found under conditions that indicated that she had been murdered.

Many of the Servian people blame King Peter for the murder of Mlle. Dechanska, and the fact has contributed to make his tenure of the throne even more precarious than it was before this episode.

The Crown Prince has thrown discredit upon the King of Servia by wild escapades in most of the important cities of Europe, including Paris, Berlin, Vienna, Budapest and Milan. In one theatre in Paris he made love to the leading lady over the footlights and in a concert hall in Berlin he threw champagne bottles at the orchestra leader, and in the leading places of amusement of all these cities he has played similar pranks.

Paints His Black Ancestor Red.

A heroic statue of Kara-George, or "Black George," the founder of the present King's family, stands in the principal public square of Belgrade. The other night Prince George climbed up the statue, which stands thirty feet high with its pedestal, and painted it red. The police found out who had done the trick, but it was impossible to take any action against the Crown Prince without casting ridicule upon his family.

Almost every night the madcap Crown Prince makes a disturbance in a box at the theatre or in some cafe. One night he threw kisses to the leading lady of the play across the footlights from his box. Of course he completely broke up the performance.

King Peter appears to be placed in a hopeless position with regard to his son. If he locks the boy up for any length of time he will increase his own unpopularity and bring the royal office into discredit. How can the Crown Prince assume the crown at some future day and rule over the nation with authority after he has been in prison for bad conduct? On the other hand, if the King continues to leave his son at liberty, he will continue to disgrace the royal family by more and more shameful tricks, and in the end probably lose his life as a number of other royal scapegraces have done.

A fact that makes the King's task in disciplining his son all the more difficult is a certain popularity which the young Prince has gained. He frequently exhibits a reckless generosity and an impulsive good nature. One day a driver upset an old woman's apple stand in the street. The Crown Prince went after the driver, thrashed him and made him come back and pick up all the old woman's stock. When he was staggering home at daybreak after a night's carouse he emptied all the money left in his pockets among the poor beggars who gather about the market place in the early morning.

King Peter is worrying himself terribly, but there will be no relief for him until his son mends his ways of his own accord, as Prince Henry did, or loses his life.

Why I Will Never Wear Skirts Again.

THE DASHING COSTUMES UP ABOVE ARE OTHER VARIATIONS OF MEN'S COSTUMES ADAPTABLE TO WOMEN, WHICH MISS POLK SAYS WOULD BE HEALTHFUL, COMFORTING AND DELIGHTFUL.

AS LILLIAN RUSSELL LOOKS IN SILKEN KNICKERBOCKERS.

How Pretty Miss Polk Has Determined for Many Good Reasons to Hereafter Always Wear Trousers, and Now Defies the Pennsylvania Authorities to Prevent Her.

MISS EVA POLK, one of the prettiest girls in the village of Bloomsburg, Pa., aged eighteen, and of independent circumstances and mind, has issued a declaration of independence about clothes. Never again, she says, unless the law compels her, will she wear skirts.

At a carnival in their village she and another belle of Bloomsburg appeared in neat knickerbockers, becoming sonave jackets and derby hats. They were much admired. Moreover, they were exceedingly comfortable. They had that evening, they declare, their first taste of man's freedom. On their way home, in the family carriage that had been sent for them, the girls glanced at each other's trim dark blue knickerbockers with mutual admiration, and when they parted it was with a handclasp and a kiss that sealed their pact, never, never to wear skirts again so long as they both should live.

The friend broke her pledge, under parental coercion. Miss Eva Polk remained firm. For two weeks she has worn neat knickerbockers, silk stockings, suede ties and a velvet sonave jacket whenever she appeared on the street. Crowning this costume was a broad-brimmed felt hat, with a sweeping feather like that which Robin Hood doffed to his victims, or a jaunty, visored velvet or silk cap, under which she gathers a mass of curly brown hair. Miss Polk says she and her friend decided that they would not attempt to further masculinize their appearance. They determined to remain as girlish and as pretty as possible, but trousers they declared they would forevr forswear. The friend changed her garb, but not her mind. When she is of age, she says, she will follow her friend, Miss Polk, into trousers. But since she has temporarily forsaken them and Miss Polk has stood firm, although even the Young Women's Christian Association of Bloomsburg has begun daily arguments with her, it is what Miss Polk says of trousers vs. skirts that interests. Miss Polk has told this paper why she prefers trousers to skirts.

EDNA MAY AS A PRETTY BOY.

LITTLE MISS EVA POLK.

By MISS EVA POLK.

For every argument against girls wearing trousers I can give you six for the custom.

The first, last and only argument for skirts as against trousers is that they are more modest, but even that is not true. It is custom alone that gives skirts their reputation for modesty. In Turkey and Persia, where women wear bloomers, the skirt is considered immodest and even immoral, a device of the devil. Consider the relative modesty of a woman's appearance on a windy day at the corner of the Flatiron Building in New York, or on Michigan Boulevard, when a gale is from the lake, or at the top of Park street and Beacon Hill in Boston—where, a wit said, a shorn lamb should be placed, because God tempers the wind to such—in skirts or in trousers. Fancy a hurricane of displaced skirts, revealing hosiery and lingerie and elastics and what not! And fancy beside them the neat, trim, well-fitting trousers or bloomers. If you have any imagination the picture conjured up is sufficient answer to the argument that trousers are immodest.

First, it is inartistic, because it does not follow the lines of the figure, but departs from them. A skirt make women look as though they were bell-shaped, whereas, to precisely quit, making the short woman as Mark Twain says of Jan in "Eve's look like Pike Byron's abbreviation, "a dumpy Diary," they are "carrot shaped," tapering woman," and the tall woman ungainly, toward the feet. Since this is true, her awkward, gawky. Into the folds and hem garments worn below the waist should, and the grain of the skirt is gathered within modest limits, define this tendency. The taste of French women is the most ex torpid state, a condition that soon passes quisite of taste. French women have a into activity In the dark closet.

fad for having themselves photographed as statues. Notice how in these photographs the same "carrot shaped" outline of the figure is preserved. Observe how the limbs are draped to disclose, not the outlines of the skirt, but the modest outlines of trousers or knickerbockers.

Were not Vesta Tilley in "Algy," and Julia Marlowe and Virginia Harned as "Rosalind," and Ethel Barrymore in "Carrots," and Sarah Bernhardt as "L'Aiglon," and Maude Adams as "L'Aiglon" and "Peter Pan," and Lillian Russell and Irene Bentley in trousers both modest and artistic?

But there are other arguments that should appeal to women as strongly. If not more so, that these. Amelia Bloomer and Dr. Mary Walker and Miss Susan Fowler started their crusades against the skirt on the ground of unhealthfulness. These grand women labored as on solidly and in the end it will prove as effectively as Susan B. Anthony and Elizabeth Cady Stanton for their sex. The skirt is the most unhealthful article of a woman's unhealthful wardrobe. If it is long enough to be graceful it is also so long that it sweeps the floor and ground and is an ideal disease-germ collector.

There are spasmodic attempts to shorten the skirt, but the only length that will assure the skirt's being kept dry is that which meets the boot top, and that is awkward. Observe how in these photographs the same "carrot shaped" outline of the figure is preserved. Observe how the limbs are draped to disclose, not the outlines of the skirt, but the modest outlines of trousers or knickerbockers.

Seven Reasons for Wearing Trousers.

The skirt is awkward. If a man had to wear skirts he would have thrown away the trousers and adopted as more comfortable and convenient garment a hundred years ago. A writer pointed to the existence of the awkward, immodest and inadequate placket, that had endured for centuries as proof that woman is not progressive. "Man would either have abandoned or improved the placket long ago," was his conclusion, and I agree with the author. But not only on account of the placket, but because it is hard to make and hard to manipulate after it is made, is the skirt an awkward garment. Woman is so constructed that it is almost impossible to make for her a skirt that will not sag soiled or shabby around the hem. The skirt, I think I have proven, is an extravagance.

It is a slovenly garment. How many times have you seen a girl who is otherwise charmingly dainty dragging about upon her hands an evening gown whose hem is soiled? That part of the gown cannot well be cleaned without having the whole costume cleaned, and that is expensive, besides sometimes ruining the gown for all future wearing purposes. So the skirt makes slutt of almost in herself, and the fact that she has not succeeded reflects itself miserably in her face and mind that night. Besides all the other evils that can be laid at the door of the skirt is that of spoiling many a match. Some men are hypercritical and these shy at a faint dark rim around the hem of a skirt, a rim not included in the scheme of garniture. Others are sensitive to mental weather, and because the girl of his fancy is pouting in an unpleasant mood he her dress or what not the cause, he postpones his proposal, often he lays it upon the table, with a lot of other resolutions that have perished, alas the.

A seventh reason why the skirt is a hateful garment that ought to be abolished with other barbarous customs, is the danger it threatens of accident. How many women have you heard of who tripped upon their skirt and fell and seriously injured themselves? And whoever heard of a man tripping over his trousers?

A woman released from her skirts feels as free as an ox that has escaped from the shambles. I shall never wear them again unless compelled to do so by law. A fortnight of freedom from skirts has made me healthier because I have exercised for the first time with freedom, ease and pleasure, unimpeded by folds of superfluous cloth clinging to my limbs.

What shall take the place of the skirt? I advise knickerbockers or bloomers of any fabric or color the wearer wishes. With full bloomers a full blouse may be worn, and a broad felt hat with drooping feathers would be charming. With these sandals or ties or high boots could be worn according to taste. Or knickerbockers of velvet or broadcloth could be worn with a ruffled silk skirt, a velvet or fancy, a tasteful belt introducing the Oriental colors, and coat they lose their style. It is not at all a little velvet cap or tuique. A sash may be worn if preferred to a belt. A tailor marring the plan of the costume. Many would make the latter better than a dressmaker's suit is adequate.

SUMMER WHIC

SUMMER is the season when romance gets a strangle hold on its victims.

In the Spring the young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of Her. With the coming of the first wild flowers She is stirred with fresh desires to go forth and make Him the humble slave of her soft caprices.

Oh, such sighs in the moonlight, such tender nothings whispered into willing ears, such reckless dallying with the edge-tools of flirtation!

For, lo! the Summer cometh on apace, and then the strangle hold of romance grips them both. Before they know it they have been transfixed by Cupid's dart—Cupid, no longer shivering in his scant raiment, whose alm in June, July and August is deadly.

From October to April the odds are even. The belle of the season is quite as likely to marry for money as for love; but in the Summer, the oldest matrimonial campaigner will admit, Cupid is almost always successful.

Summer gives him so many allies. He may masquerade as a cuddy on innumerable golf links. He may entangle himself and his wiles in the meshes of a tennis net. He may sail up aloft in a yacht, stirring strange vagaries in ordinarily placid hearts. He may perch beside the chauffeur in a motor car or lurk in the sands and on the billows of the sea beach.

There is a hiding place for him on every yacht, canoe, Summer hotel piazza; from gently swinging hammocks he never takes his gaze; Summer idlers, deliriously happy and off their guard after long months of prudent toil, Cupid follows like their shadows.

Miss Elizabeth Clark had for chaperon her aunt, whom she was visiting in a vine-wreathed Summer cottage a few miles out of Cliuchport, Va. She was a kindly and tolerant chaperon and addicted to afternoon naps. It was during one of these siestas that Miss Clark, having taken hers briefly, and knowing her aunt required a longer time to repair the waste of nature, called the negro boy, Jim, and told him to saddle Molly.

Molly was one of the finest saddle horses in the country, and her shining roan sides were a handsome foil for Miss Clark's slim length in a blue riding habit, and her swinging gallop set off the graceful way in which Miss Clark sat her saddle.

Molly and her lovely rider cantered over the gravelled road under the cedars and swung into a long, slow gallop as they reached the highroad. Miss Clark flung back her veil and gave herself up to the delight of the ride. Her little gloved hand held the reins lightly, for Molly had a reputation for being absolutely surefooted. Miss Clark's dark eyes swept lovingly the red path that wound before her until it was lost in the blue haze of the far hills. She gave neither look nor thought to the party of surveyors at the left of the road. But to a tall young man in a gray suit, with a gray, wide-visored cap, the red road had an fascination—until it became the path of a wonderful vision. He swore the other surveyors called "the chief" and "boss," ceased giving his orders while in the middle of a sentence:

Johnson has never learned what Mr. Frederick M. Tate was about to say. The order trailed away into silence, and the speaker's eyes followed the shining sides of the roan horse and the graceful outlines of a blue riding habit going straight to the point where the red road merged with the blue haze of the hills.

Wedded in a Speeding Auto.

He felt an odd tightening about the heart at the fancy that perhaps the girl and the horse would disappear in the perspective of his life as they were disappearing now at the vanishing point of the road. Stout Yankee common sense drove away the megrims. He recalled that everybody in Virginia knew everybody else, especially among the first families of Virginia. The girl could not be galloping beyond the borders of the State, and, since she lived in the State, he would find her.

At the hotel that night the chief of the surveying party made discreet inquiries about a saddle horse. He had a fancy for riding, he said, and he had a particular liking for roan horses. Did his listeners know any one who had a fine roan saddle horse?

A hotel lounger in a long, loose, black coat and a broad-brimmed hat drawled answer.

"Miss Clark that lives in the white cottage at a turn of the road has a roan that carries you as though you were in a rocking chair. But she wouldn't sell him for any money. She's got a niece visiting her that 'most lives on Molly's back."

Ten minutes later the civil engineer said he would take a stroll about the town. He hadn't had a chance to really see the place yet. Declining the offer of a citizen to show him the way, he walked rapidly toward the vine-wreathed white cottage at the turn of the road. His cigar went out in his abstraction as his swinging steps brought him to the gate. She was there, the goddess, in a gown that resembled a white cloud, and she was talking in pretty, drawling accents to an elderly woman, who had a shawl wrapped about her shoulders.

Mr. Tate's exploration of the town ended at once. He went back to his hotel and dreamed about a goddess robed in a white cloud. The next evening he met her at a hotel hop. Every evening thereafter there was a trio on the verandas of the white cottage, and one evening, when the aunt's rheumatism took her within early, Mr. Tate made some very personal and private remarks, which Miss Clark answered in a personal and private manner entirely to Mr. Tate's satisfaction.

He made some further personal and private remarks which had to do with his mother. Then there was a long conference, which ended in a plan at which they both laughed.

The result was seen two weeks later when Miss Clark got on the accomodation train for Cliuchport and Mr. Tate's mother boarded the same train. The young lady sat in the rear of the car, the elder in front. They wasted no time in conversation with each other. In Mrs. Tate's eyes was grim determination. Her son might plan to elope with a poor girl, who had nothing but her beauty and amiability, but he should be foiled.

When the train arrived at Cliuchport Miss Clark, being younger and more agile, alighted first. Mr. Tate helped her into the automobile that was chugging and snorting in its impatience to start. He introduced her to a middle-aged man, who wore a round, straight collar and a high, black waistcoat. In a second the automobile carrying the runaway lovers and the accomodating parson was speeding up the street toward the parsonage.

Looking back, Miss Clark saw a woman climbing into a carriage and waving her umbrella in token of her impatience. A moment later the carriage was in mad chase.

"Do you think she can overtake us, Frederick?" The bride-elect clutched the bridegroom-elect's arm.

"She can't overtake us, dear, but she may make a scene at the parsonage."

"To prevent that," said the rector, "I will marry you in this conveyance."

"In an automobile?" gasped Miss Clark.

"Precisely," answered the rector. Stand up."

They stood up, swaying as the car bounded forward.

"Do you take this woman"——

"Yes."

"Do you take this man"——

The words came tantalizing back to the pursuing mother. One last wave of the admonishing umbrella.

"I pronounce you man and wife."

The stentorian pulpit tones rolled back to her, and, realizing her defeat, the elder Mrs. Tate sank back in the carriage and wept. A little later at the

It was the girl's mother who exclaimed: "This is so sudden!" Miss Fargo' answer had been much more encouraging.

Alarmed by this sudden caper of erratic Cupid, Mrs. Fargo hurried her daughter back to their country home at Ardsley-on-the-Hudson. The next day Mr. Nathaniel Moore appeared at Ardsley. Mrs. Fargo took her daughter to Paris. On the next steamer arrived Mr. Moore.

The rest, Cupid grimly reflected, would be easy, and so it was. The captain, who had won in a battle of football giants, won gloriously, went down instantly and ignominiously before the first charge of tiny Cupid. And in the dust he remained quite unashamed of his defeat.

He was for a time engaged to Miss Sherley. Then they were disengaged, because, Miss Sherley declared, Captain Sherlin was quite impossibly jealous. Their friends say they are about to become re-engaged, and that Captain Sherlin, victor in football battles and vanquished in the tournament of love, says the re-engagement will be followed by a speedy marriage, or he will never play another match game.

And because Summer is the kindest season to lovers, and because this is the anniversary of the big guns that captured her fancy and her heart for the time, at least, their friends believe that with Cupid's help he will be successful.

Mr. Albert Sholler, of Philadelphia, saw Miss Sorbenheimer ride. He said as an equestrienne she was admirable. He saw her swim, and declared that she was the most graceful of amateur swimmers.

Miss Sorbenheimer saw Mr. Sholler win the record at cricket, and smiled her approval of the neatness of his playing. His heart warmed at the smile. Courage was born within him. He asked to be presented. They discussed athletic sports. Later they discussed matrimony. Impulsively they went to the Little Church Around the Corner and converted the theory of matrimony into a condition.

Most novel of all novel nuptial journeys was that of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Robinson. Mr. Robinson was a prominent member of the Brooklyn Yacht Club and owner of the small yacht Gauntlet. They spent their honeymoon in a race to the Bermudas for the Sir Thomas Lipton thousand-dollar cup.

"We have kept our marriage a secret from all our friends, and hoped that we would get to Bermuda before the facts were known," said the bride as she waved farewell. "But, even though it is known, I am going just the same. I am the skipper of the Gauntlet, and if I don't go the Gauntlet doesn't go. We will show them. We are happy and hope to win the race. I have no fear of rough seas, and consider that my place is at my husband's side."

They lost the race, but the skipper of the Gauntlet declared that there had never been a happier wedding journey. The crew said that although they encountered stiff gales the presence of the brave little bride aboard kept their courage high. Upon her return Sir Thomas Lipton sent the bride a cablegram. For her bravery, he said, he would send her a consolation cup.

All on a Summer day, Prescott M. White, a student at the Peekskill Military Academy, fell in love with Miss Florence Hood, an assistant teacher at St. Gabriel's Seminary for Young Ladies, Mr. White is the son of a multi-millionaire, of Nova Scotia, and Miss Hood is the daughter of a steel man of Derby, Conn.

But Cupid tosses away such social disparities as he would a feather. He knew that in the ordinary course of events the orbits of the two would never cross. Therefore he arranged a game of basket ball at St. Gabriel's. Miss Hood was a most graceful player. Cupid placed the young Nova Scotian in a tower of the Peekskill Academy, with field glasses at his eyes to watch the game.

At first he watched all the players, then only one of them, then that one persistently, and with extravagant admiration.

Cupid's stratagem was successful, so successful that the road between Peekskill and New York was marked one Summer day by a cloud of dust that followed a swift-speeding automobile, fracturing all the speeding ordinances in its haste to get a young couple to a waiting clergyman who a few minutes later performed the marriage ceremony for them.

The bridegroom's father attempted to annul the marriage, but thus far he has been unsuccessful. Cupid and Summer settle had the serious ending of matrimony.

It is only in Summer that the beautiful billows have a chance to deal intimately with love and prospective marriage. In August the lure of the Jersey Coast dragged eligible James Wilson to Long Branch, where there is a splendid surf. In his blue and white striped trunks and jersey, looking neither to the right or left, he marched across the sands on the afternoon of his arrival, plunged beneath an ordinary roller and struck out for deep sea.

When he judged that he was a quarter of a mile out, he flung himself on his back, carelessly half swimming, half floating, and muttered to himself:

"Thank goodness, I've the ocean to myself, out here!"

A few minutes later something cuffed him smartly on the ear. He grabbed for what he supposed to be a stray bit of flotsam, and caught——

The prettiest, shimmest little black-stockinged ankle in the world.

"Oh!" came a voice out of the crest of a white cap that seemed to Mr. Wilson even more beautiful than the ankle, which he had been too astonished to release from his muscular grip.

"Sir, will you kindly let go of my foot!"

Then Mr. Wilson came out of his trance. Amid profuse apologies he released the ankle. Just then a white cap filled his incautious mouth and eyes. By the time he got over sputtering with the former and could see with the latter, the ankle and its mate, yards away, skyward, were following in the wake of a flashing white arm doing the overhand stroke.

All in vain the fascinated Mr. Wilson inspected the beach and hotel piazzas in the hope of identifying the ankle and that white arm. At length his swimmer's instinct assured him that a white arm capable of such an overhand stroke would logically be white and at last, one day when he had ventured ... further than ever before, and was turning back, discouraged, he saw, flashing out of the top of a wave many yards farther out to sea, the fascinating object of his search.

"Heavens! is the girl a mermaid?" he wondered.

Suddenly he realized that something was wrong with that white arm: the stroke seemed to have no power in it. Mr. Wilson's own good manhood aroused him as he went to the rescue.

"Swimmer ahoy!" he called out when near enough to make himself heard.

MISS ELIZABETH SHERLEY, WHO WAS WON BY THE FOOTBALL PROWESS OF CAPT. TOM SHERLIN.

"What's ... Mr. Wilson shouted ...

THE WAGES OF SIN

How Honor, Riches and a Husband's Love Were All Thrown Away with a Light Laugh as Mere Bagatelles by Young Mrs. Joseph Green, of the Famous New Jersey Family—and the End Was a Tragedy, and Death!

Here is Charles Hughes, for Whom Mrs. Green Threw Away Love, Honor and Life itself.

Reception Gowns for the Afternoon

With Three of the Latest Models Just from Paris, in All Black, in Broadcloth, in Orchid-Colored Pongee, and the Very New Straight-Front Empire.

By Mrs. Osborn, Creator of Fashions for the Fashionable Women of America

A—Cloth Gown, Showing Attractive Ribbon Surplice Bodice.

B—Black Cloth Gown, Trimmed with Lace and Chenille and Showing Stole Panel Finish.

C—Orchid-Colored Pongee with Embroidered Bodice and Novel Jabot Beading.

D—The Ultra Smart Straight Front Empire Gown in Striped Velvet, with Chenille Lace Bolero.

NO matter what functions crowd the social year, the afternoon reception remains a feature from season to season, giving place in big cities, and especially in New York, to the card party, a less formal function which has, in a great measure, supplanted it. In New York a woman will order special afternoon card party gowns made with a very elaborate waist and very simple skirt, for only the bodice is really observed.

Velveta, astlina and crepe de Chines in whose make-up suggests many pastel stripes are smart for such gowns, as well as the same materials in plain surfaces or embroidered. Fullie tissues are also used, as are brocaded and blurred silks and some lovely self-colored sample-face cloths.

A good deal of self-colored lace as well as the yellow and cream-colored varieties may be seen trimming new Autumn gowns, and a sort of silk braided in graduated thicknesses is run in and out of the open meshed lace with a good deal of effect. This braid is known as "worms," a name suggested by its appearance, which is much that of the crawling things one sees on the ground after a rain in Spring.

Together with the renewal of a fad for chenille we have a revival of fringes. These appear more in the details of a gown than as actual trimmings of it.

In dress bodices yokes have extended into long pointed and flat effects, the lace often extending from neck to belt.

Some such effect appears on the bodice of Figure A. It has a stock and front and back piece of all-over lace upon which are appliqued motives of another sort of lace.

A wonderfully pretty effect is produced by surplices formed of broad satin ribbon of the soft, heavy variety, with a loss a to the figure. The stole e grain and quality much like pon de sole, For the quality of skirt material employed is a square effect in the t chiffon-cloth—a soft dull finished heavy tween these pieces, and as small broad-ribbon is necessary. Taffeta or satin cloth bears trim the centre of the bodice piece in the line of the hip.

The gown is laid in pleats and in some having the effect of pleats. Both are cor along the edges, the material being adjusted to give the effect of narrow cords. The narrowing of the pleats at the waist line and I ever spreading below it gives a very graceful appearance to the figure, especially as the pleats fall loose below the hips in soft flowing lines into the train.

Rather large sleeves have corded seams running up in them to give them shape and repeat the corded effect in the gown. It aids the elbow the material is pleated or gathered on the inside seam, allowing plenty of freedom for elbow movement.

At the bottom the skirt is finished with a blind facing which does not show. The gown may be made up in any color and in silk as well as soft wool materials of a dressy character.

The circular skirt is a very popular model this season, and, happily for it, skirts are worn long in front and trained in the back. To make the short circular skirt never hang satisfactorily. It requires ungainly extra seams and needs to be judiciously taken up.

Figure B illustrates one of the models in black which will be worn this season. It is of cloth with a stock and long cuffs of velvet and is trimmed in black chenille. The gown is made with a panel of velvet, with full directions for bead- and ordering.

a bit below the waist line in the front to below the knee at the back. It narrows at the waist line, giving a slight effect to the figure. The stole is in the back, extends down

CHAPTER XXX

HAVE you ever seen those men who go around to fairs and Summer resorts cutting out silhouette portraits of people? They are wonderfully expert with the scissors, and in a jiffy they will make a likeness of you out of black paper and charge you a quarter for it

It is funny how busy every one is who is making likenesses. People seem to be crazy to see how nice they look.

Well, a man came to Bayshore and just commenced coining money cutting out portraits We went every morning and watched him for hours. It was his trick. the only trick he had, I reckon. Very much like the exchange editor, who clips out something with the scissors, then pastes it on a piece of paper.

His business was cutting things out. If he could just cut out a few things I can think of he could make a lot of money.

He was a very interesting man. He told us lots of interesting things about his profession

It is funny how most every man thinks his is the only really important profession, and will relate by the hour all his wonderful deeds of prowess. Even if he is only a grass cutter he will tell you about different difficult grass cutting feats he has performed where other grass cutters would have been completely balked.

I COULD HAVE CUT HIS PORTRAIT WITH AN AXE.

HE CUT A GOOD LIKENESS OF ME.

HE CUT SILHOUETTE PORTRAITS OF PEOPLE.

Well, this silhouette cutter was one of those. He told us how he could cut out a perfect circle with one swipe of the shears. And how he had cut a portrait of Theodore Roosevelt in half a minute which the President pronounced the most perfect likeness he had ever seen It was so natural you could even see through the eyeglasses.

One day he cut a beauty of Mary Jane and one of Tige. Ma had him cut one of me. It was perfect. He didn't trace it from anything either, like the artists who make the imitation pictures of me that appear in some of the papers. They ought to trace some ideas too, and some resolutions. One time when we were watching him there came a darky boy along whose name was Applesauce Eaton. Applesauce had a twin brother by the name of Griddle Cakes. They were both very dark Applesauce wanted a picture of himself cut out. He said if he got a picture of himself it would look like both of them, so his brother wouldn't need one. The silhouette cutter told him he was a silhouette himself, and asked him why he wanted it

ONE OF MARY JANE.

"Well," he said, "ef I gits one ob dem porkraits ob yourn I'd be de same color in it as de white folks is, an' 'sides dat, ef I gits my picture took on dat paper hit gwine look lots mo' like me dan hit do ob de yuther folks. 'Nuther thing, hit gwine look like me an' my brother too, so git along dar, man, an' shake dem shears o' yourn."

He pulled out his two bits and handed it to the portrait maker, and took his seat in the chair. He was so easy it was a shame to take the money. I could have cut his portrait with an axe. Here it is.

Imitation---Its Good and Bad Sides

IN this illustration there are three views of life. Here is the young bird, full of fright and ambition, learning from its mother the mysteries of flight.

Then the kitten learns from the old cat, by observation and imitation, the scientific way to catch mice.

Last comes the little boy, walking up and down behind his grandfather, imitating the old man's thoughtful ways, everything EXCEPT THE THOUGHT.

The imitative faculty in animals and in human beings is one of the most important of all. It is the faculty which brings about change and growth in the EASIEST, least fatiguing manner.

This tendency to imitate is one that parents especially should understand. It is a tendency that the grown man should combat in himself, while understanding it and encouraging it in childhood.

One of the most amusing and charming spectacles in this world is a little girl four or five years old trotting behind her mother, imitating the mother ridiculously and lifting up, in a knowing way, her short little skirt.

And one of the most irritating things in the world is a grown man palpably and without any originality imitating the ways of some other—hoping that outward imitation will be mistaken for inward knowledge.

Beautiful and necessary in childhood, Imitation in old age means stagnation

Parents should remember that childish imitation is a thing TO BE ENCOURAGED. The imitative faculty comes into play very early—that is why we see it among the lower animals incapable of any intellectual efforts BEYOND imitation.

Parents should realize that the child acquires at least three-quarters of its physical equipment by imitation.

In the first place, through imitation we acquire speech, the instrument by which the brain expresses itself and gets in contact with the outer world.

Through imitation children learn to walk and to use their various physical faculties.

Many a child is punished for imitating the bad habits of its playmates or of older people—when it is the parents that should be punished for putting the child under evil influences.

IT IS ABSOLUTELY IMPOSSIBLE FOR A CHILD TO RID ITSELF OF THE TENDENCY TO IMITATE.

What you don't want your child to imitate, YOU MUST KEEP FROM THE CHILD.

Nature knows that the child requires this quality of imitation, and the faculty is bound to exercise itself regardless of YOUR WILL. It is for you to see that the child is exposed to such influences as will make imitation only beneficial.

STUDY THE CHARACTERS OF CHILDREN. Realize that the child in almost every respect IS NEARER TO THE ANIMALS THAN TO THE ADULT HUMAN BEING.

Children's characters develop exactly as do the characters of the most primitive animals. Their first instincts, or emotions, are fear, anger, aggressiveness. The baby will bite its nurse long before it knows enough to be fond of anything.

Unfortunately, more than half the parents are foolish creatures, believing that the child should be born perfect, that it IS born perfect, or else that it is in some way a monstrosity. As a matter of fact, the child is born a little imitative animal. Its imitative faculties must be encouraged, its animal tendencies, which often include the telling of lies, and stealing, and cruelty, must be put up with and gradually eliminated. You will only make a child what you want it to be BY INSTILLING INTO IT THROUGH KINDNESS AND EXAMPLE GOOD DESIRES AND FEELINGS TO REPLACE THE NATURAL ANIMAL EMOTIONS.

The grown up man or woman is as much HURT in prospects and in character by the dominating habit of imitation as the child is HELPED by that habit.

Among animals, practically EVERYTHING is learned by imitating other animals—for in the animal's mind no original mental process takes place.

The bird learns to fly by imitating its mother; it learns to pick up worms, to find food, by imitating its mother—and that is about all it ever NEEDS to learn.

The kitten learns by imitation a few accomplishments which make up a satisfactory cat—imitation does all that it requires.

But with man, fortunately, it is different.

Man through imitation learns as much as the animal can know, and he learns it in the animal imitative way. He can learn to walk the tight-rope, catch monkeys, etc., by imitation.

But he cannot learn to THINK by imitation. And the man who allows his thinking processes to be controlled BY HIS IMITATIVE FACULTY is a man doomed to failure except as a clever imitative animal.

The little grandchild imitating his grandfather's walk, his attitude, every little trick and manner, is a pretty sight, and he is on the road to growth

But the imitative grown man is no better than the sea captain's monkey that cuts his own throat trying to shave.

Half of our grown up talk is PURE IMITATION. Nearly all of us use phrases and ideas ready made.

Nine-tenths of us go through life with ready made beliefs, all imitation.

The average Democrat is a Democrat BY IMITATION. The average Republican has IMITATION Republican ideas.

Slang grows because it is so much easier to use some other person's feeble wit than to invent your own way of saying a thing.

Profanity is the vice of feeble minds, because swearing is simply an easy IMITATION way of expressing anger or excitement. The profane man uses the profanity, the irreverent oaths that he has heard to give imitation expression to his anger.

It is a good thing, occasionally, to take stock, so to speak, in our own mental storehouse. It will not hurt you to watch for this tendency to imitation in your own ideas, in your talk, and your way of living. Be sure that where you imitate you cut off chances of growth and useful originality. How many of your political and other beliefs are your own; how many borrowed?

Do you think as you do BECAUSE YOU HAVE EXAMINED THINGS FOR YOURSELF, because you have done your own investigating and thinking?

Big classes think alike. The men with money will be found, nine-tenths of them, opposing taxation that is favored by nine-tenths of the men WITHOUT money. Both sides are really sincere, but they take opinions from one another; they don't think.

Men in one section of a country think in one way, those in another section take the other side—imitation again. Sometimes it takes a war with great loss of life and property to settle a question that might have been settled peaceably if men could learn to think for themselves.

Grown men of conscience should remember in their own conduct the force of example.

There is no doubt that nine-tenths of all the unnecessary drinking, and hence nine-tenths of the drunkenness, may be traced to imitation. Smoking by little boys is due to imitation entirely. The passion for imitation, put in them by nature because it is necessary to growth, leads boys to persevere in smoking against their stomachs' violent protest. The man who does foolish things—believing that they don't hurt him—should always ask himself whether he may hurt others through their imitative faculties.

There is no use saying you are not RESPONSIBLE if others imitate you, for you are responsible FOR EVERY EXAMPLE YOU SET.

A child is taught to look up to his father as manly and noble. The father smokes in his son's presence, and then whips the boy when he finds him smoking secretly. Nothing could be more preposterous.

If you have not the strength or courage to break a strong habit for your child's sake, BE SURE THAT THE CHILD WON'T HAVE STRENGTH TO RESIST NATURE ALWAYS URGING IT TO IMITATE.

Look at this picture, then look at the children and the world in general about you. You will be interested to see to what extent the craze for imitation governs human beings—as yet in their mental childhood.

The consumptive or nervous wreck, smoking, suffers from imitation

The woman with the crazy hat, squeezed vitals, big bill that she cannot pay, suffers from imitation.

The man of small means wearing his life out trying to be like some one richer is a childish victim of the imitating habit.

Encourage imitation in children—it develops them.

TRY BEING YOURSELF. Among grown-ups an ounce of reality is worth a ton of imitation.

The Children of Holland — By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner

IF we had visited the planet Mars, I do not believe we could have seen a more unusual place or people, as compared with America and Americans, than we found on day in our trips about Holland.

The Island of Marken is three hours from Amsterdam, part of the way by train and part by boat on the Zuyder Zee that strange sea formed by an inundating deluge which befell Holland in the thirteenth century, cutting Friesland away from the main coast and creating islands everywhere. Of all the islands, Marken has kept more of the primitive characteristics, habits and customes than any other, perhaps.

It was Saturday that we made our visit and we, the Boltonian Lad anchored their boats in the channel. Such a picturesque fleet as it was with snowy sails, lanchs from the masts, and making an almost continuous screen through which we saw the houses and the people as we approached.

Just outside the wharf a boat was coming in. It hung to the land one white and one deep maroon sail, and the sailor who pulled at the ropes wore bulging blue trousers, gathered full at the waist and knee, and a bright scarlet jacket. It was a delight to thrill the soul of an artist, and it is no wonder artists on these islands are as thick as sea gulls during Summer seasons.

It was haying time at Marken and the men and women were busy loading the hay which had been brought to the wharf ready for market

"There is striking similarity in their faces and out of every dozen children ten have hair of beaten brass."

As if that sight alone were not enough for our eager eyes, down from the bunch of boxlike houses in the background swarmed a score of children of all ages and sizes, in their island costumes, alert for the profit they have learned the boats always bring. There were many kodaks and many English and American and German tourists seeking the unusual and the novel and the Marken children reaped a goodly harvest of pennies that afternoon.

And while this was all very interesting, it possessed a side that was saddening as well to one who loves the human race and mourns for its gradual uplifting. Primitive and simple and artless as the life on the island of Marken is to its industrious and cleanly and kindly as are the people, the sin of the age has crept upon them through the contact with tourists.

Greed for money has become a means with the children of this island.

And with it have come all the other evil passions. In their eagerness to possess the pennies which the tourists are ready to bestow for the privilege of a snapshot, they have developed avarice, jealousy, envy and ill will.

They push and crowd one another for position in a group; they intrude themselves into a picture uninvited and grasp for the pennies the selected ones receive; they follow tourists and importune them for money favors, and from golden haired cherubs in picture they soon become litle tempered demons of violence and vituperation when disappointed or put aside.

I saw the mind, dimpled, bare arm of a beautiful baby, which an older girl was crying over her shoulder. The girl turned in time to see my camera, and frowned and struck at me because we refused to kodak her when she followed us, or to pay her to visit the interior of her home

We had already visited another interior, and been amply recompensed for the cost, of cleanliness who rules in Holland.

As our boat sailed out some English women in the party tossed pennies on the water, and I got quite a lesson in child psychology. Never have I seen a more unhappy exhibition of greed among children.

They scrambled for the shining bits of copper a boy struck a girl a smashing blow in the face, and older children fell upon other ones and tore the money from their grasp.

Their faces were marred by anger and hatred, and this was my last view of the picturesque Island of Marken.

As we were taken down the canal in the train to a house boat. And it was our good fortune to see a bride and bridegroom walking to the "State House" (the City Hall) to have the wedding ceremony performed.

Blooming with youth and happiness, and blushingly conscious of the perfection of their new clothes they strode along the banks of the canal, attired as their ancestors were attired three hundred years ago, no doubt, and unconscious of the changes the end when I remarked to a citizen of Volendam, a half-hour from Marken, that so much continual inbreeding would lead to stupidminded children, the reply was "That has already happened at Marken."

Autumn may bring in the cut of skirts or coats, but the question of shoes remains the same. It was a happy favor of chance that we could carry this picture of Marken to you.

A beautiful young girl of fourteen directed the tiller of the houseboat, while her father pulled us down the stream by a rope across his breast. Her face was charmingly rounded, her coloring exquisite, and her expression intelligent and dreamy. I wondered would it be kind if one should take her away and educate her for an active worker in the great world over the seas. And I am still wondering.

At Volendam the dress is native and novel, but scarcely as picturesque to the eye presented their quaint costumes as at Marken. The cup with beaked ears is coquettish, and on the children particularly pleasing.

Everywhere in Holland the children are many, and adorable. My heart goes out to them and they take love as their birthright and respond with smiling good will. They seem like children who were loved before their birth and who came desired into life, and who have been well cared for since.

I have not seen one disagreeable child in Holland, save those of the Island of Marken, who have become "grafters" through contact with tourists. Nor have I seen a bold or ill-mannered child

One day we went up to Friesland, to Leeuwarden, the home of the old Frisian Kings. It is a considerable city of thirty thousand inhabitants, yet it is out of the line for tourists and has retained its village simplicity in consequence. The wealthy dames of ancient pedigree wear the old head-dress, made of pure gold, twenty karats fine, and costing eighty dollars without the expensive cap which usually accompanies it. Sometimes these headpieces are made of sterling silver, but only the servants venture to wear a lesser metal

Our advent into this town seemed to be an event to the children and, though there was an exposition in progress and many out of town people in evidence, the children seemed to realize we were from another world than the one to which they belonged. Yet nowhere was I more impressed by the good breeding and kindly hearts of the children of Holland than here

An automobile veil, worn to protect unruly locks on boat and train was evidently as interesting to the children of Leeuwarden as the metal and lace headgear of the town ladies was to us.

Yet in that admirable restraint the sweet flock kept their curiosity. Three little maids followed me to the door, one more than an hour, and finally waved us farewell kisses as we moved away from the town But all this hour they masked their curiosity under cunning subterfuges and pretended to be looking in shop windows nearby, or to turn and forget something that they might walk by us again and talk another way.

Never once did they boldly stare at us.

I have mastered three sentences in the Dutch language, one in order to know how to call my children together: "What is your name?" When I asked one of these little girls this question finally, and so broke the ice of strangeness, there was great excitement in the group and much blushing and giggling. Their eyes are a soft, velvety brown, limpid and soft and brown, and when she said her name was "Bovina" I was pleased, and when she added "Smith" I was not. I was sorry. But, of course, it will change some day, for Bovina is not to be no spinsters or bachelor girls in Holland

As I left my little friends at Leeuwarden I could not help thinking how differently a bevy of American children would have expressed their pretty delight at a Holland Islander, with her strange head-dress, had walked down Broadway, or the street, indeed, of any of our American cities.

Bless the little children of Holland

I would like to carry a thousand of them home with me. They would be the models of good manners to show our American youngsters.

Madmen and Alienists — By Clara Morris

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal Examiner

I HAVE been asked ere now by the irresponsible reporter boy,

"How I'd like to be the lee man"—but, though I'm not envious of his job, yet I'd rather be the iceman than the mental doctor, who brings comfort to his patron, while the other brings the word of doom that means lifelong restraint, announcing it with a light and airy cock-sureness of manner that is apt to impress the more looker-on with the depth of his knowledge or the purity of his motive.

These alienists might possibly become a menace and a danger to a certain class of citizens were they not conference is all off—I am here, now go as far as you like."

"Why so pensive?" I asked the Song Writer.

"Memories, memories," he told me. "Memories of the past. Perhaps I bore you guys with my dreamy way, but no song writer can't be there with the three-base hit unless his soul melts sometimes. No song writer can keep his mind on a ham and egg breakfast and a delicatessen dittber without losing some of that fine touch for which a true poet is noted for."

BRIGHT GALAXY OF SHOWS TO TEMPT THEATREGOERS

"Daughters of Men" Matinees

Henry B. Harris has arranged to have Cohan & Harris's play, "The Daughters of Men," presented at the Park Theatre for a series of matinees, commencing Monday next. The engagement at the Park Theatre will last a month, and matinees will be given on Mondays, Thursdays, Saturdays and holidays. The Daughters of Men" is a story from the point of intelligence and refinement, and is said by those who have seen it to be unlike Mr. Cohan's previous effort. The Lyceum Theatre company is to play the piece in Boston, in recent years has received such genuine appreciation and approval at the hands of every American, and appeals alike to the unprejudiced supporters of both sides of the great question, equity versus

Grand Opera House

Time back your orders. I rule for today's high class vaudeville bill, for the dark lining the pockets of the employer is apparent at all times. Bert Leslie & Co. in a new playlet by the favorite author, Gertrude Hall, Mr. and Mrs. Hall Woods, the latter being better known as Miss Lulu Glaser, and Miss Lillian Burkhart, the well known opera singer, head the bill. Miss Burkhart is an ideal portrayal of the accomplished, straightforward young girl who refuses to be a party to any crooked dealing, even though it may put her in the control of a wealthy boss, who, through wiles plotting to ruin the couple. The sketch is a bright and breezy one, and will be found to be a most pleasing vehicle for the clever female star. Miss Burkhart has a most pleasing personality and will be found to be a most pleasing vehicle for the clever female star. Miss Burkhart has a most pleasing personality and will be found to be a most pleasing vehicle for the clever female star.

Boston Theatre

"The Old Homestead" so far from losing its grip on popular favor, seems to be increasing after year and, judging from the size and enthusiasm of the audiences at the Boston Theatre, where the play just might rounded out the first half of its seventeenth engagement, there is no limit to its popularity. As an exponent of the finest, purest, "home" drama, the "Old Homestead" has won its own record. "The way of the world is hard," and "Charity covers a multitude of sins," "The Old Home" and "Home" always remain eloquent and impressive.

Next week will close the engagement. There are Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

Guilbert-Chevalier

Boston loves to entertain distinguished visitors from abroad, and there will be two fine strangers here next Friday evening. The fame of Yvette Guilbert and of Albert Chevalier is as well known here as in the other side of the Atlantic. But it will bear the two celebrities under the most advantageous circumstances in Symphony Hall, Miss. Guilbert will render a number of the songs of Mme. Du Barry or "Camadour" will sing those songs from the clubs in addition to other selections. Mr. Chevalier will be heard in the quaint old ballad of Albert Chevalier has not been seen in Boston for he has a most enthusiastic following of the London alums, embodying humor and pathos, and will present a whole range of emotion and character acting.

Hollis Street Theatre

This will be the laughing week at the Hollis Street Theatre, as it was last week, for Sam Bernard has got them laughing "and that is to keep them." Mr. Bernard, as Mr. Hoggenheimer, has sounded new depths of fun making. He has the support of a company containing many very good comedians, and the pretty and clever Miss Georgia Caine has a splendidly well drawn role. We see Miss Caine doing a turn of the cavalry on her pet bobby horse, and William Friganza is also with the Hollis Street Theatre but that is not a source of dainty and comedy new song. Another number that is sure of prolonged enthusiasm is the "Poker Love," which is sung and played by Bessie Hope and Carl Lowe, two dainty little stars who do their parts perfectly. The engagement will last but one week more after this, with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. The curtain rises promptly at 8 o'clock evenings and at 2 o'clock at the shows.

Columbia Theatre

Al. H. Wilson and the London Gaiety Girls will be the attraction at the Columbia this week. Comedian Wilson is one of the original Irish entertainers on the stage. In "A Janey's Vacation" he will be given plenty of opportunity to do the sort of thing for which he is the star. The support given by the Neraldas, the sensational equilibrists; Lewis and Green, singing and talking comedians; Marie Lee, the Jolly soubrette, the Musical Bells, the marvelous manipulations of musical instruments, and Rene Washburn and Belle Austen, who are par excellence in handling the comedy talk. The amateurs will be given a chance to get in their work next Friday night and the book will be kept busy.

Park Square Rink

Boston, which is noted for its "big things," has another feather in its cap in the shape of the largest skating rink in existence. Its floor, which is hard rock maple, contains over 72,000 feet of skating surface, and is as smooth as a looking glass. The main hall is 225 feet long and 140 feet wide; from floor to ceiling there is a distance of 87 feet. The band stand in the centre of the auditorium is suspended from the ceiling by huge steel cables, and can accommodate 100 people. Here the people can visit this mammoth edifice at one time.

An attractive novelty in the shape of a "skating ballet, entitled "Titania and the Beauty Coursers" is in preparation. Miss Rose Cohen is to be prima donna and there will be 24 others. Miss Bidgood, ballet master, etc.

Other strong attractions will be the Rink's strong man and wonder, Mr. Cummings Bros. boxers, John Topp, the Alice Powers, with his famous Black Hawk Band. Mr. Hill's matinees and the big Friday night ball. The Rink will be open from 9 a.m. until 11 p.m. Prof. Carrie Russell, Lee Mitchells and the bowling pictures.

"Madam Butterfly" Next

October 29 is the date set by Henry W. Savage for the presentation at the Castle Square of his first Japanese production, "Madam Butterfly," the opera of Japanese tragedy by Giacomo Puccini. This will substitute the first production of a new opera in the city. It is now in the hands of the opera company, and has already been heard in New York. It is a story both interesting and beautiful. Joseph Sheehan, the tenor, will be the Lieutenant Pinkerton, and Miss Ethelynde Smith will be Madam Butterfly. The latter is a part of the most exacting character, and will be a most interesting one. The opera is a tragedy, and will be a most interesting one. The opera is a tragedy, and will be a most interesting one.

Ready for Symphonies

With Dr. Muck, the new conductor, here and settled, with the auction sales of seats to season ticket holders for the Symphony season of 1906-1907. The first public rehearsal and first concert will be given next Friday afternoon and Saturday evening, and Boston for the first time will have the opportunity to know the new conductor.

The coming to Boston of Leoncavallo, the celebrated Italian composer, to give a pair of concerts at Symphony Hall, will be a most important event in the musical season. These concerts will be given on Saturday afternoon, the 20th inst., and Sunday evening, the 21st inst., and in the change in the programme being made Joseph Lorelle, the great Russian pianist and piano virtuoso, will be heard on Nov. 11, and within the following thirty days he will begin one of the long est tours in his career. His first appearance in Boston is scheduled for Saturday afternoon, November 10, in Sleinert Hall.

Lyceum Theatre

Full houses should prevail at the Lyceum Theatre this week when Sam A. Scribner's Gay Morning Glories will be the bill. In the musical farce in two acts of the "The Three Admirals" and "A Jay in Japan" interspersed in the usual vaudeville acts, among them Harvey Pinard, the buffoon and comedy Mr. and Mrs. Bert Hodges, the Quakers, James Cook and the Rathskeller Girls. The Rathskeller Girls will be continued in Parisian creations, designed by sensational ideas by Mr. Scribner.

Howard Athenaeum

Leading among the vaudeville hits at the Howard this week will be the Gabbett Trio, a quintet that is noted for its originality. Another feature will be the Hutchison Revue trio in "The Bluebird Brothers." The Crane Brothers in their "Mad-cap Lot Up" and the Abbott Brothers in novelty gymnastic Messrs. Brothers, Lee Bert Bell and Adams, complete the Stamp pair. In "A Matinee Idol Tailor" the Rathbones, in an artistic bath dance and Sandhan and Hess a favorite comedy sketch artists, Farnum, Lucas and accompanist and Bitter and Lee, sound quaint and original comedy. Last but not which will be brought out with Howard and the burlesque tunes.

Bowdoin Square Theatre

"Wedded, but No Wife," is the seven o'clock play that the Bowdoin Square Theatre offers this week, with Charlotte Hunt the charming star of the Lafayette Square party, at the head of the cast. The play introduces a team better fitting, and it is because the wife is wedded but no wife, that the complications arise. The husband is played by Frank Lamphier, and the part of Mildred Grey, the forsaken daughter, about whom the story is centered, will be presented by Miss Hunt.

Palace Theatre

Sam Scribner's Gay Masqueraders, an organization well known to the patrons of the Palace Theatre, will begin its annual visit there Monday afternoon. The curtain raiser is the first act of a two-act musical comedy, entitled "The Fixer." The two leaguer in the second act "Homeward Bound" and is merry throughout. The principal roles are Ida Emerson, Lena Le Quint, Thomas Gilpin, Mabelle Hudson, Hazen Sweet and James E. Cooper, John J. Clark, Miss May Buford, Redford and Winchester and Wallie, Phil and Carrie Reynolds and others. The concert will commence at 7.45 sharp.

This evening at the Malden Theatre concert, Cressy and Dayne will be seen in the most famous of Cressy's little selves, "Town Hall Tonight," and Charlotte Parry and company will present "The Unexpected Holberry Sisters, Swan and Rambert are to be comedians, Ch. William Sisters and Robinson, La Belle, comedy jugglers and the Majestiques.

Will M. Cressy and Blanche Dayne will head the bill at the Globe next week in "Town Hall To-night," and Charlotte Parry and company will present "The Unexpected Holberry Sisters, Swan and Rambert are to be comedians, Ch. William Sisters and Robinson, La Belle, comedy jugglers and the Majestiques.

Sunday Concerts

A very worthy charity, St. Mary's Infant Asylum, will receive the proceeds of a concert to be given to-night at 8 o'clock at the B. I which will commence at 7. It will appear Valerie Bergere and company in the Pinero "Princess Trixie" Dr. Ian Maclaren, Redford and Winchester, Lilly Saville, Rooney sisters, Morris and Paige, Hughes and Brown and the kinetograph. Such can be procured for the to-day at the Washington street entrance.

To-night the Bowdoin Square Theatre concert will have in it some of the strongest cards of the season, among them Ed. Simon, gardner Company in a sketch the Three Mirkie's, Cherrill and Baker, Morris and Watson, Brown and Wright. Simon, Bigger Co., Lewis and Green, Tenny and Wallie, Phil and carrie Reynolds and others. The concert will commence at 7.45 sharp.

This evening at the Malden Theatre concert, Cressy and Dayne will be seen in the most famous of Cressy's little selves, "Town Hall To-night," and Charlotte Parry and company will present "The Unexpected Holberry Sisters, Swan and Rambert are to be comedians, Ch. William Sisters and Robinson, La Belle, comedy jugglers and the Majestiques.

"Social Whirl" Coming

The type of society publication which thrives on the person of vanity and notoriety prominent people is keenly burlesqued in "The Social Whirl," the best of recent day musical comedies, which opens in Boston a week from to-morrow evening, this time to the Columbia Theatre. The book is by Charles Doty and Joseph Herbert, the latter writing the lyrics, and the music is by Gustav Kecker. The original cast comes here from New York, intact, since. It includes Adele Ritchie, Charles Mande Raymond, Ada Lewis, Frederic Bond, Elizabeth Brice, Caroline Lewis, Walter F. Ingolt, William Carlisle, Mark Hedley, Walter Craven, Irene Hobson and eighty others.

Billy B. Van Here Soon

Those who aspire to keep abreast with the genuine musical comedy success will welcome "Patsy in Politics," with Billy B. Van as the star, which has a small army of clever comedians, dancers and singers to the Globe for a week, beginning Monday matinee, Oct. 15.

Kate Condon's Height

Reply was made by letter to an inquiry who desired to know how tall Kate Condon was, and if she was of the Gibson type, but the letter evidently scarred Miss Condon is five feet six inches tall, but is not of the Gibson type. Instead, she is of the type characterized as "a dream."

GANS-NELSON FIGHT
The only opportunity that will be afforded the sporting fraternity of seeing the actual and most wonderful fight [illegible] THE FINAL ROUND AND WHIRLWIND FINISH.

AT THE OLD HOWARD

"THE Music Master" off the stage instead of on it, himself David Warfield actor, has no pose in private life. The odd face of this young man has a paradoxical touch—sandwiched in an infectious laugh. Its lines fade and it grows boyish; hearty in his mirth he is cordial, quite sincere.

He looks away from the footlights very much as behind them. The sober, black, characteristic dress of the old musician is missed, but the plain and unaffected attire of his privacy does not obliterate stage impressions. See him on the stage and you would know him off the stage. There is slight illusion in his "makeups."

Mr. Warfield knows Boston well. He played here before he had been much more than a month on the stage. His genius for mimicry first took him into theatrical life, and that was in far-off, desolated San Francisco. It still abides his mimicry. That is why he can speak a delicious German dialect—the dialect of German high castes, that of a von or nobleman.

Dialect Must Be Natural.

"No, I can't speak German," he said. "If the Music Master talks like an educated German affecting English, it isn't because I know the tongue of Leipsic. But I can't tell you how I do it—that is quite beyond me. Neither do I speak French, but listen—"

Mr. Warfield jabbered a la Parisian. Not a French word was spoken, yet the accent was perfectly boulevardier.

"I can see I don't just know how—I just do it, that's all. A trick of the ear? Perhaps. Yet I have made no study of dialects. I know that to be effective a dialect must be natural. Oftentimes when heard upon the stage it is absurdly otherwise, though like as not most amusing. But it is much more impressive if true to life. To be natural, yes, that's the thing."

That is also Mr. Warfield's whole stage method. Its value is attested by tears shed and laughs provoked when he is the Music Master. A man of temperament, he can feel. Imaginative, too, he can also sound the notes of emotion. The lines are the author's, but the by-play, the infinite, subtle lights and shades with which he illuminates character are as much his own as the very eyes and lips with which he moulds impressions.

Smiles Through Tears.

"I like," he said," a part where pathos and humor have a chance—I do not think I'd care for one all sadness. Give me a tear through a smile and a smile through a tear."

He voiced that sentiment with the sob uttered on the stage when, standing at the piano, he repeats "One, two, three" as the music master who has earned his long search is over, and he at last, in a pretty pupil, has found his daughter.

"I haven't any method. I never took any actor for a model, and I'm glad I didn't. I went my way and did everything accordingly. When I have to play a serious part I merely try to do it naturally.

"If you have the touch of human nature your audience will always respond. It is never deceived by the artifice of a self-conscious player. It is real characters—some that is lifelike, one that has the touch of reality—that makes a play live long. Jefferson's Rip van Winkle proved it. So did John E. Owens in Solon Shingle and Denman Thompson as Joshua Whitcomb.

Mr. Warfield said that actors were much affected by environment, that it takes but little to throw a performance off the key, adding Holds Fast to Character.

"When I saw the Majestic Theatre here—fine, big and beautiful—I was nervous. You see we had been playing so long at the little Bijou in New York. I didn't know how such a quiet, delicate little play would go in such a great big house. It was the same story, but so much bigger setting. But see how well the play went here the first night, and now it is going still better. It was a fine audience, so discerning and appreciative. It did not break in upon scenes with applause. I hate that, because it breaks my thread. After the curtain is down? Oh, yes, I like to hear applause then."

Mr. Warfield rubbed his hands together and laughed very heartily. His opening audience was so insistent in its approval that he had to make a little speech. But he did not drop the pose, the walk or gestures of his part when pulled for a moment back to his private self.

"I never" he explained, "let go of the character I'm playing when I respond to calls. When I spoke my thanks to my opening audience, I wanted to speak in dialect. I would have done it, too, if I had not thought it might have seemed affectation."

His Debut in Boston.

Mr. Warfield made his Boston debut in a play of New York life called "The Inspector." He played a minor character role and also in another scene gave "imitations." It was an embryotic effort. People who saw that boy hardly beyond the throes of stage fright, did not have the clairvoyance which would tell that he was to come again some day as a stage star and an actor with unquestioned elements of greatness.

"That was fifteen or sixteen years ago," said Mr. Warfield, smiling at the retrospection. "I went into vaudeville after that—only in those days they were not so polite, and called it "variety." After that came burlesque and seasons with Weber and Field and others. I got into more serious work after I met David Belasco."

Once it was stage tradition that actors, to learn to act, had to play long in stock companies and appear in so many parts a week that, with rehearsals and all, they were qualified for admission to the dinner pail brigade. But this player flouts the theory. It went with strut and declamation of a past stage era. The Warfield style of acting is simpler and more subtle.

All the World's a Stage.

"You couldn't," he said. "teach a man to act in one hundred years.

"Acting is just like painting—you must begin by having it in you. Try to speak and act as people would naturally do under the circumstances which the play puts around you. But, after all, isn't acting universal? Doesn't everybody act? Children do—so does a salesman who is trying to sell you a tie or a pair of shoes. He holds up a tie and says, "isn't it gorgeous—beautiful!" But perhaps he really thinks it's hideous. But he's acting—playing a little part to sell goods.

"Acting is reproduction. You see and think how you would act or speak according to a mood or a situation, and try upon the stage to reproduce it. When I have a role to play I don't merely study a part. I take it as a skeleton and around it build a character. I read and think. I reach out for all the moods and tenses—all the lights and shades, until I absorb it. Then, when I go upon the stage, I don't have to think how I shall say this or how I shall do that. No—I'm 'The Auctioneer' or 'The Music Master.' I've merged myself into the character and the part just plays itself. Don't go scrambling after effect—let it come of itself."

Man Must Have Acting in Him to Succeed—Warfield

You couldn't teach a man to act in one hundred years.

Acting is just like painting—you must begin by having it in you. Try to speak and act as people would naturally do under the circumstances which the play puts around you. But, after all, isn't acting universal? Doesn't everybody act? Children do—so does a salesman who is trying to sell you a tie or a pair of shoes. He holds up a tie and says, "isn't it gorgeous—beautiful!" But perhaps he really thinks it's hideous. But he's acting—playing a little part to sell goods.

—David Warfield.

Humor Is One of the Elements of the Popular Song of To-day

This Is Illustrated by the Song, "My Chilly Baby," Printed To-day on Other Pages of This Newspaper.

HUMOR is one of the elements of a successful song. Probably two-thirds of the "best sellers" are those containing a golden substratum of humorous ideas. Sometimes the motif changes from gay to sad, but the element of fun is somewhere lurking in the majority of songs to whose accompaniment we dine in the cafes and restaurants, or to which we listen in our homes in the evening.

An illustration of this quality of a popular song is "My Chilly Baby," published elsewhere in this newspaper to-day.

"She's so frapped,
She's so frail," mourns the dolorous lover.
"When I kiss them ruby lips
They look like they was froze.
She's so pretty proud
She's so high strung,
When I says 'I love you'
She just shivers with delight.
When I says 'Good-by to-day,'
Her tears fall just like snow."

The quality of the verse of popular songs is seldom of so high a standard as the music. "My Chilly Baby" is a case in point, but in this instance there need be no quarrel between the lyric writer and the composer, for they are one and the same, Miss Hattie Starr having served to the final capacity of author and composer.

Of a similar character is the song, "How'd You Like to Like a Girl Like Me?" published by the same firm—Leo Feist, No. 134 West Thirty-seventh street, New York. The author of the latter song is Felix Feist, the man who wrote "Can't You See I'm Lonely?" and the music is by Joseph H. Nathan. It is sung with excellent effect by Florence Bindley in the play, "The Girl and the Gambler."

Miss Bindley is the clever young star of vaudeville and musical drama who helped to raise money for the supplies needed at San Francisco after the quake, by appearing with an organ grinder and singing his accompaniments. She also appeared as a gypsy and wielded her tambourine, pleading for contributions. Gold pieces were flung at her from all parts of the house, nearly all of which she caught deftly in her tambourine. She was one of the most active Thespians in the aid of the AMERICAN relief fund for the earthquake sufferers.

Miss Bindley is one of the most beautiful women in the dramatic profession. When she was playing in "The Girl from the West," it was suggested that she should have played instead "The Girl from the Golden West," by reason of the color of her hair. Although she has been on the stage twenty-five years Miss Bindley is only twenty-eight, for she could not speak plain English when she made her debut.

How Good Food may Turn to Poison.

DECAY is not digestion, you know, even when it takes place in the stomach.

Food decayed in the body after being eaten is as dangerous to health as food decayed before being eaten.

Food nourishes or poisons, just according to how long it remains in the Bowels undigested.

Most of the Digestion occurs in the thirty feet of intestines.

They are lined with a set of little mouths, that squeeze Digestive Juices into the Food eaten.

The intestines are also lined with millions of little suction pumps, that draw the Nutriment from Food, as it passes them in going through.

But, when the Bowel-Muscles are weak, the Food moves too slowly to stimulate the little Gastric Mouths and there is no flow or too little flow of Digestive Juice, to change the food into nourishment.

Then, the food decays in the Bowels, and the little suction pumps draw Poison from the decayed Food, into the blood, instead of the Nutrition they should have drawn.

Now, Cascarets contain the only combination of drugs that Stimulates those Muscles of the Bowels and Intestines just as a Cold Bath, or open-air Exercise, stimulates a Lazy Man.

Cascarets therefore act like Exercise.

They produce the same sort of Natural result that a Six Mile walk in the country would produce without any injurious Chemical effect.

The Vest Pocket Cascaret Box is sold by all Druggists at Ten Cents.

Be sure you get the genuine, made only by the Sterling Remedy Company, and never sold in bulk. Every tablet stamped "CCC."

EDWIN MARKHAM ON
IN October Cosmopolitan

More than two million American children, the majority of whom are under twelve years of age, are compelled by dire necessity to labor long hours in dismal factories—for what?—their daily bread, bare sustenance. Theirs is life without laughter and play; life robbed of its childhood and school; while they toil merely for the privilege of such life.

We send missionaries to enlighten the pagan Chinese and the savage African, but do not we also need enlightenment—some ray of wisdom which shall show us that, in stealing from childhood its years of play and companionship, its school and growth, we are robbing the nation of its future?

Have we, as a nation, while physically brave, retrograded to mere moral cowards—too fearful of disturbing the commercial equanimity of a few money-grubbers? Or shall we halt the iniquitous system of "child labor" and give the nation's future citizens and mothers a chance to be real citizens and mothers?

In October Cosmopolitan is the second of the Markham series of articles—"The Hoe-Man in the Making." The first article (in September) was entitled "The Child at the Loom." In October Cosmopolitan is "Child Wrecking in the Glass Factories."

Read what Edwin Markham, author of "The Man with the Hoe," has to say; his message is a message for all good citizens.

BOSTON SOCIETY GIRLS BATTLE for ATHLETIC HONORS

MISS FANNIE OSGOOD AND MISS SALLIE PIERCE, IN RACQUET

SOCIETY

Bent on House Parties,

Heeds Call

To the Pleasures

OF THE HILLS

By a Society Woman.

THAT enviable element of society, which is free, like the birds, to choose a new abode with every changing season, is now holding its Autumn jubilee in the hills—having its real holiday where blazing hearths in remote country homes beckon the social wanderers, melt down the cold conventions, and warm back to life the old-time spirit of hospitality.

The country house party is the function par excellence of October, and these are the days when the favored sons and daughters of leisure echo in chorus the sentiments of a certain delightful old lady in a certain widely read book, who expresses her exuberance thus: "Isn't it the fun of the world to be alive?"

Among the Vincent Club girls who have deserted the ranks of October belles to join those of November is handsome Caroline Dabney, whose engagement to Augustine H. Parker was announced in the Spring, and who has set the second of November for her wedding day.

Miss Dabney, generally recognized as one of the most charming and interesting girls of her set, is the only daughter of Lewis S. Dabney of Beacon street, a Harvard '61 man, and prominent member of the Somerset, Exchange and other clubs.

She is an attractive brunette, with exquisite coloring and fine poise and bearing.

The prospective groom is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard F. Parker (Rose Guild) of Somerville, and a graduate of Harvard, class of '97.

Mildred Cox to Join Garden of Buds.

A WELCOME addition to the garden of "buds" to bloom the coming season is dainty Mildred Cox, daughter of Mrs. William E. Cox (nee Nickerson) of Chestnut Hill, and who is one of the prettiest and most interesting of the whole lovely lot of them.

Miss Cox, like her sister-buds, the Misses Thomas, is of a musical as well as athletic bent. She is always beautifully gowned, and has a rare distinction of bearing and manner, most unusual in so young.

She will likely make her professional debut at a series of teas, and her formal bow at a ball to be given her at the Somerset.

Greenough-Perkins Wedding in January.

NOT until January is dashing Margaret Perkins, or "Peggy," as her intimates love to call her, to become the bride of Charles P. Greenough.

Miss Perkins is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Perkins of Exeter street, and while at Palm Beach with her parents last Spring her beauty, vivacity and smart gowns attracted no little admiration. Mr. Greenough graduated from Harvard last June. He is a son of the Malcom Greenoughs of New York.

Owing to the large and fashionable connections on both sides, the wedding will be the most brilliant event of the New Year.

Just at present Mr. Greenough is with the Perkinses, enjoying a motor trip through the Berkshires.

Miss Warren to Spend Winter in Rome.

MUCH regret is felt among the debutantes of the coming season that Katherine Warren, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel D. (Hazard) Warren, one of the most popular of their members, will sail for Europe the latter part of the month to spend the Winter in Rome.

The Warrens have been spending the past few weeks at their country estate in Dedham.

Boston is also to be deprived of the society of the interesting and beautiful young widow, Mrs. William Russell (Mary Heed) whose wedding at Manchester a year ago was one of the most brilliant of the season's events, and whose sad bereavement some three months ago has cast her into the deepest of mourning.

Mrs. Russell is at present occupying her North Shore cottage, which she will close in a few days in order to spend some time with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Head, before sailing the latter part of the month.

Miss Winthrop's Wedding Day Near.

NOVEMBER seems to be adding to its popularity as a bridal month, and among others to choose it for her wedding is Miss Margaret Winthrop, whose engagement to J. Grant Forbes was announced in August.

Of all the beautiful Vincent Club brides, the clever Margaret, with her grace of movement, her lovely dark eyes, her gorgeous coloring and pretty alertness of expression, will be unexcelled.

Miss Winthrop is the daughter of Mrs. Robert C. Winthrop, Jr., of Walnut street and Manchester-by-the-Sea, and is the most accomplished member of the Vincent Club.

In her dance with Clemence Crafts at the club's annual show two Winters ago, which proved a clever travesty on James Hazel Hyde and Mme. Rejane, the actress, she received encore after encore. In her "Gypsy Sword Dance" last Winter, her effective poses and pantomime were wonderful results of much brown art, the finale of which was a constant revolve of fully a minute's duration while she balanced a sword on her head, with both arms suspended in mid-air.

The prospective bride spent much of her Summer at Newport, the guest of her aunts, the Misses Ellen and Ida Mason, at their villa on Bath road. She is to be one in the quartet of beauties chosen to attend Miss Evelyn Blight when she becomes the bride of Malcolm Sands at Newport on the eleventh.

Mr. Forbes is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis H. Forbes of Commonwealth avenue and a brother of C. Steward Forbes and of F. Murray Forbes, who married Marjorie Cochrane. His sisters are Miss Ethel Forbes and Mrs. Austin Potter of Beacon street.

He is a Harvard '01 man and a member of the Tennis and Racquet Club. He possesses considerable literary ability, and during his senior year at Harvard wrote the Hasty Pudding play, "The Dynasticrat."

MISS ELEONORA SEARS

Society Reopening Town Houses.

ALREADY many of the fashionables are wending their way back to town. Among the first arrivals is Mrs. Wolcott Johnson, who has returned to her Commonwealth avenue home after a delightful Summer spent at her Wenham villa on the North Shore.

Mrs. Burr Forter, who has been spending the past few weeks in the White Mountains, has opened her Commonwealth avenue residence for the Winter.

The Eben S. Drapers will close their Hopedale estate and return to their Beacon street home early in November.

Miss Elizabeth Davis of Commonwealth avenue will spend the Winter in New York.

Mrs. Albert Millbank of Scabright, N. Y., is the guest of her sister, Miss Phyllis Robbins, at Hamilton.

CUPID BUSY IN SOCIETY RANKS

Many Engagements of Interest to the Smart Set of the Hub

Boston shares equal interest with New York and Cleveland in the recently announced engagement of Miss Ethel Greenough, daughter of Mr and Mrs Malcolm C. Greenough (nee Tiffany of Cleveland) to Mossey Holmes of New York. Mr. Greenough is a member of the Somerset Club, and the son, Charles P. Greenough, 2d, is to marry Margaret Perkins, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton Perkins in January. Mr Holmes graduated from Harvard in '99 and is a member of the Knickerbocker and the Cornelian Yacht Clubs.

Another out-of-town engagement which interests Bostonians is that just announced of Miss Emilie Terry, daughter of the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Roderick Terry of New York, to Eugene Hale, Jr., son of Senator Hale of Maine, and a well known Harvard man, class of '05.

Miss Terry, who occupies an important position in the world of charity as well as that of society, is an especially interesting girl. She is fond of out-door life and has distinguished herself in golf and tennis. Mr. Hale is identified with a member of New York's most fashionable clubs.

Announcement has just been made of the engagement of Miss Louise Miller, daughter of Mrs. William Miller, and Arthur M. Beale, Harvard '97. Mr. Beale is a brother of Professor Joseph H. Beale, Jr., of Cambridge.

Professor Silas and Mrs. MacVane of Cambridge have announced the engagement of their younger daughter, Dorothy Alice, to C. Francis Williamson, a representative of the Equitable Life Assurance Society of New York.

Miss Dorothy, who was one of the brides maids at the wedding of her sister, Julia, to Lieutenant Maurice Dudeman of the Eighth Dragoons, French cavalry, in Paris last month, is well remembered through her stirring exploit of joining the Defender Company at the Colonial Theatre. She has been studying for grand opera in Paris under the tutelage of Professor Randle B. who was charmed with her exquisite mezzo-soprano.

A wedding will take place abroad in late Spring.

Mr. and Mrs. Isaac P. Hutchinson of 7 Rutgish street have announced the engagement of their daughter, Linda, to Howard Colburn Blake of San Francisco, class of '01.

An interesting Newport engagement, just announced, is that of Miss Hazel Temple Read, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Read of New York, to the Rev James Austin Richards, pastor of the United Congregational Church. MUSICAL BOSTON WILL AID FRISCO ORPHANS

Concert to Be Given in Chickering Hall on October 18 to Swell the Fund.

By Dr. Gertrude T. Bodfish.

The season during which people have given themselves up to the pleasures of the flesh and to the rejuvenation of the body alone is past. The time for invigorating and strengthening the soul and mental faculties is now here. As we grow in strength of soul we gain poise of mind which enables us to receive readily the knowledge of the universe

As a muscle develops in size and power by properly regulated exercise, so the mind expands in beauty and strength when it is made to lose fond fuss and kindness in every living thing. Soul power means a tenderly watchful care over the conditions of society over our own weaknesses and over the weaknesses of others

Would we develop this soul power?

Then let us practice the art of loving more and more; not loving alone our own family and our own friends, but our own particular set in which we move, but we must let this love quality flow out to the uttermost parts of the earth till every human soul is included and feels the power of our love.

Any [illegible] can every one? In the [illegible] Boston [illegible] Symphony [illegible] of San Francisco [illegible] Ladies' [illegible] Club, [illegible] at [illegible] under the auspices of the New England committee for the San Francisco orphans' fund.

The program consists of the finest talent in Boston, and this fact, added to the knowledge that we are trying to raise money to rebuild the orphanages for little homeless children—victims of the late earthquake will doubtless secure a crowded house.

The [illegible] the celebrated Tom [illegible] Club, composed of the [illegible] singers in school formerly of the [illegible] Mary Monument Church, [illegible] soprano soloist of the First Old South Church, and Miss Edith Thompson, pianist, formerly with the Symphony Orchestra.

The Temple Quartet was organized nearly forty years ago, and was the outcome of the dedication of the new Tremont Temple at Boston; hence the name. Mr. Washer, second tenor, has been connected with the quartet for nearly twenty-five years, and this is sufficient guarantee that the standard of the quartet has been kept up.

The four voices are so matched that the blending, beauty and effects are natural; there is no [illegible] in [illegible] and the [illegible] excellence. Wherever this [illegible] they meet with unbounded applause.

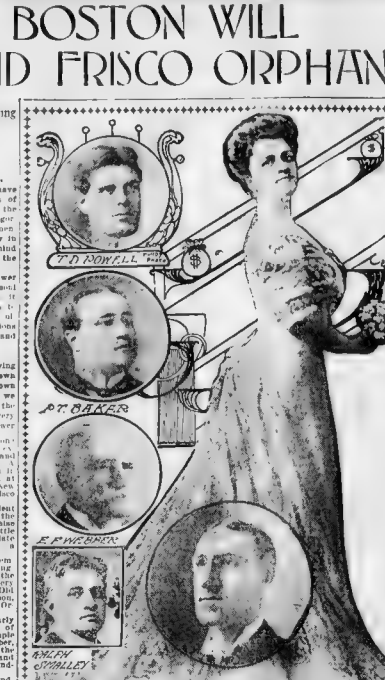
The numbers rendered by the quartet alone will be worth the price of the ticket.

But what can we say when to the fine singing of the quartet is added the grace, beauty and sympathetic tones of one of our leading sopranos?

The instrumentalists are also of the highest rank, and will be a great feature, the violoncello will have its rich and human tones here, for not under the skilful touch of our favorite own cellist.

The artistic work of Miss Thompson has come to us from [illegible] she has been [illegible] Her former connection with [illegible] Church [illegible] Boston.

[illegible] will [illegible] one evening for the benefit of our fund. The scene of the play is to be laid in San Francisco. Mr. [illegible] once lived there and has a very [illegible]



MUSICIANS TO TAKE PART IN ORPHANS' BENEFIT.

The complete program in detail will be given next week. The cost of the tickets is one dollar; on sale at the box office of Chickering Hall and at Hiffer's.

Another benefit to be given soon, details of which will be given later, is of a theatrical nature.

So the good work is going on, and we hope others will follow the example of the above artists and help us to rapidly increase the fund for the orphaned and destitute children of San Francisco.

THE RICHEST AND GREATEST MINING CAMP IN THE WORLD.

$328,547,000 FOR LEADVILLE

Great Dinero Tunnel

The Great Yak Tunnel Plant at Leadville, Colo.—Output 7,000 Tons of Ore Per Month.

This is a vertical and longitudinal drawing, showing the old workings and ore bodies on the mother lode of the Dinero mines, which will be drained by our tunnel, the black indicating where the ore was taken out.

Leadville Has Produced $328,547,000—Produced Last Year $13,000,000, and Its Present Monthly Output Is 90,000 Tons of Ore.

Sugar Loaf Mountain, four miles from Leadville, has produced $12,000,000. The Dinero Mines, in the center of the richest veins in this mountain, including the Mother Lode, have produced about $1,500,000 to water level—an average depth of less than 400 feet.

The Dinero Consolidated Mining and Tunnel Company owns, leases, and controls about 100 acres, including the famous Dinero Mines, from which a quarter million dollars alone was taken from a space 80 by 60 feet on one vein.

The Dinero Tunnel will be bored 3,045 feet from the base of the mountain and will cut the Dinero veins at about the depth of 1,000 feet below the surface—five or six hundred feet under the old workings, which were closed down years ago because of the acid-eating waters destroying the necessarily expensive pumps and pipes.

The tunnel will drain off this water, and the incalculable wealth of the flooded lower levels will be ready for us. The deeper you go the richer is the ore, and no Leadville mine has ever given out. Here is a vast treasury of wealth, and the tunnel is the key that opens it.

The Bartlett tunnel at one end of our mountain was bored a distance of 1,200 feet to gain a depth of 20 FEET, and it paid WELL. The Bartlett is paying concern to-day and making regular shipments. Proportionately our 3,000 foot tunnel would gain us a depth of 50 FEET, whereas, the fact is, our tunnel will gain us 500 FEET, proportionately—TEN TIMES AS MUCH AS THE BARTLETT. THINK OF IT!

Leadville has three railroads, one and a half miles from the Dinero, and the largest Smelter in the world is less than three miles from our mine.

STOCK NOW 5c A SHARE

As Fiscal Agent of the Dinero Company, I am authorized to offer for sale a limited amount of stock at 5 cents a share. This sale of stock is for the purpose of building the tunnel which will drain the water from the mines and thus leave open to us the great ore wealth of the lower levels. Once this water is drained out, the mine is one of the most valuable properties in Leadville. Were it not for the fact that the Dinero tunnel is the only way to get at the great wealth of Sugar Loaf Mountain, the company's stock could not be had for many times this price. In the closed down workings there are ore over 1,000,000 tons of low grade left at the time the mine was flooded, and all this wealth will be instantly available. There is more than a million dollars of low grade ore on one dump alone which will be available by our future concentrating mill. There is enough medium and high grade ore practically blocked out and exposed in the lower workings of the mine to pay for the tunnel.

STOCK WILL ADVANCE IN PRICE

Write at once for prospectus, reports and photographic copies of smelter returns from car load shipments of Dinero Ore.

This is not a prospect but a proven mine that has been shipping for years.

An average year's shipment by leases of medium and low grade ore from the upper dry levels of the Dinero years after the lower levels of high grade ores were closed down on account of water have been over $32,000 a year, NET SMELTER RETURNS, some of that ore running as high as $147 a ton for a car load, the average being for 31 car load shipments $37.45 a ton.

THINK OF IT!

Most mines would think themselves lucky if their high grade averaged that amount in smelter returns.

This stock will advance in price very soon and those subscribing now will thus be enabled to double their money almost immediately. Our officers and directors are conservative business men of high standing whose names are a sufficient guarantee of square dealings. BUY DINERO STOCK—ALL YOU CAN GET—AND BUY IT QUICK—NOW IS YOUR OPPORTUNITY!

ABOUT THE GREAT YAK TUNNEL.

Started by a Kansas City Man, Who Died Worth Millions.

Extracts from the Herald-Democrat, Leadville, January 1, 1906

"The Yak Mining and Tunnel Company is the only extensive tunnel proposition Leadville has ever had. Its properties and holdings have broadened year by year. It pierces directly Iron Hill and Breece Hill.

"Since the late lamented R. Moore, of Kansas City, took control of its affairs there has gradually grown up a great, well balanced and comprehensive scheme of development, which involves hundreds of feet of new drifts, winzes and raises each month. Seven thousand tons of ore per month is supplement its development. The use of electricity alone makes possible the volume of ore tonnage and development work in the Yak property a shining example of cheap, effective power and power transmission. WHICH MUST ULTIMATELY INDUCE A GENERAL USE OF ELECTRICAL ENERGY IN LEAD VILLE MINES."

A GREAT EXPERT'S OPINION.

Mr Dudley M Gray of Denver has submitted an exhaustive report on the conditions which govern this great property—the DINERO MINES. As he dwells upon the character of the ground from a specialist's standpoint, and sets forth facts and figures on the richness of the ore, many thousands of tons of which are now in sight from the smelters in years past, and other information which only a practical man would be expected to know, we cannot give much of the report at this moment.

He places his whole reputation at stake on the outcome of this proposition and shows in part, as follows, the confident and other authorities support me, that you and your friend have secured a most desirable contracts. I consider your tunnel and related properties in the Sam Patch as the BEST IN THE STATE, not only from standpoint of its present value of result, but also as to its safety as an investment; consequently, a most attractive proposition."

Mr Joseph F. Herget of Leadville, a former owner in the DINERO, writes that he knows this mine to have paid fortunes in the past to the water level, and many hundreds of thousands of dollars since that time from the old workings and that First Inving of the U. S geological survey, believes Sugar Loaf Mountain to be in its infancy. He congratulates the company on the magnificent opportunities offered in the fortunate acquisition of this property and timely again for a drainage tunnel.

LEADVILLE'S EXPECTATIONS

Of the Dinero Tunnel.

Extracts from the Herald Democrat of Leadville, Col., August 26, 1906:

"There are hundreds of places yet where splendid investments are waiting for the fortune hunter. Take Sugar Loaf for example. Here fortunes have been made for many men, in many instances in exceptionally short periods of time. Here Thomas F. Walsh realized wealth which was possibly the basis of his now numerous millions. He was owner in the Dinero property, from which he cleaned big money. The Bartlett claim is slipping regularly of good grade ore. On this mile a tunnel was run 1,200 feet to gain a depth of twenty feet and the project paid handsomely.

"Topographically Sugar Loaf mountain was the surface of volcanic origin and would be a counterpart of the famous Nevada gold fields. Here exists the same conditions—numerous parallel veins running northwest and southeast, intersected by great reefs of porphyritic dykes. A tunnel a mile from this point into the mountain, which would tap all these veins, the deepest at a point being between 900 and 1,000 feet, would be the greatest boon the section could receive and would be a moneymaker for the projectors."

SOME FAMOUS MINES OF LEADVILLE.

Macon, Ga., Oct. 6.—What promised early this morning to be a repetition of the race troubles in Atlanta has broken out in Macon.

Two prominent young white men, Will and Horace Adams, were shot at the fair grounds tonight, while the grounds were packed with visitors.

A mob quickly formed and caught a negro who is supposed to have fired the shots. While the crowd was bringing him out of the fair grounds, with cries of "Lynch him," the police succeeded in taking the negro from the enraged crowd.

A white man who was firing at the negro was also arrested, but he was released at once by the mob.

The negro was hurriedly put in the patrol wagon and taken to the barracks. The police say that the negro who did the shooting has not been captured.

A riot call has been sent in by the police and the militia may also be called out.

Macon is filled with visitors attending the state fair and there is intense excitement.

The infuriated crowds are dying all the negroes out of town.

New York, Oct. 6.—After a nerve-racking contest which cost the life of one man, caused probably fatal injuries to two others and slight injuries to a score more, Louis Wagner, of the French team, in a 100-horsepower Darracq car, won the Vanderbilt cup race over the Long Island course to-day. His time for the 297 miles was 290 minutes, 10 2-5 seconds, or better than a mile a minute for the entire [illegible] Lancia, the Italian, was second; Duray, of the French team, third; Clement of Italy, fourth, and Jenatzy, the daring German, fifth. Lancia and Jenatzy, old-time rivals, fought it out throughout the race, the latter pulling ahead near the finish.

Hart F. Shepard, in a 130-horsepower Hotchkiss, was the driver who was not fortunate enough to be responsible in measure for the death of Kurt Gruner of Passaic, N. J. Just as Shepard was rounding Kruc's corner on the Jericho turnpike, Gruner tried to cross the course in front of the car. His average was 29 and a fraction [illegible] mile an hour. Wagner's best lap was his sixth, his time [illegible] yet to be won by the representative of another country.

Wagner, the greatest motor racer of the world who has been achieving honors abroad all season long, is the man who captured the cup. He won in a Fiat race the same make of car which Heaney drove to victory a year ago.

It was not without a struggle that Wagner secured the honor. He was forced to fight the greatest fleet of motor balloters against Lancia, the Italian, Duray, the Frenchman, and Jenatzy, the daring and erratic German, and the remainder of one of the largest and best fields of drivers that has ever done battle in an interesting affair.

It was a race replete with thrilling periods, devoid not of excitement, and one which at times seemed particularly spirited although Wagner took the lead on the very first round and maintained it to the finish. At times he was away in the lead, only to lose some of his advantage to the other drivers, and on the last lap he had a particularly close call.

Remarkably Close Finish.

From a racing standpoint, the particularly striking feature of the contest was the fact that six cars, representing as many nations, should finish a contest of 327 miles within such close time, there being but 16 minutes and 16 seconds between Lancia, the second man and the winner. This reduced to miles makes a fraction less than two-thirds of a second in favor of the winning boat. In the matter of a long distance contest between Lancia and Duray was even closer than that, being but [illegible] seconds. The [illegible] which was recorded as an interesting feature and which it is remembered that the average distance per hour was a trifle more than [illegible] miles on Long Island course, another is not the least.

The closeness of the duel battle between Wagner and Lancia. They fought [illegible] miles getting [illegible] a strong factor for [illegible] position and [illegible] leading the lead. [illegible] when it was declared [illegible] the race, as the hundreds of thousands had flocked on the racing surfaces all around the course. Man Cut to Pieces.

One man spectator who ran in front [illegible] was literally cut to pieces and a young boy was [illegible] The wonder of all was that so few were not more fatalities, as the [illegible] accidents on the course. Not one after the contest [illegible] was [illegible] during the contest as from [illegible] which the crowds [illegible] through to the wire fencing and stood 25 deep. Warrant for His Arrest.

It later turned out that Shepard knew Gruner personally. As soon as he learned of the fatality Shepard withdrew from the contest, claiming that he had broken his crankshaft.

Later in the day Sheriff Gildersleeve of Nassau County set out a warrant for the arrest of Shepard, not that he held him responsible for the man's death, but rather as a matter of precaution.

The showing of the French cars was particularly creditable and carried out the idea that the team was a strong one, particularly [illegible] who had all along been looked upon as a dangerous man.

Wagner drove the race of his life. At times he seemed like a fiend incarnate, and had he once averted from the track the path he would have caused destruction. His car went through the air with the well balanced engine that it was, a veritable [illegible] speed in response to the torrent [illegible] The Italian was going at a pace and mostly after, at East Norwalk he lost a tire and the Italian [illegible] Jenatzy and Wagner and Wagner [illegible] going at high speed.

MAID'S CONFESSION STIRS FRANCE IN BLUE DIAMOND CASE

Rivet, France, Oct. 6.—At the rehearing of the famous case of Alexandre Grecer, former counsellor of the Russian embassy in Paris, who is charged with stealing the famous blue diamond of the Countess Rodelec du Prat. Mme. Gregor's maid startled the spectators when she said that M. Gregor was the last person who had tried to induce her to change her testimony. This she refused to do as she said she believed M. Gregor guilty.

The case has created a sensation in France, owing to the prominence of all the persons concerned. The theft is alleged to have been perpetrated while the Gregors were guests of the Countess at her Chateau Kerstraten in Brittany. The diamond was found in M. Gregor's luggage and the Countess at once caused his arrest.

M. Gregor declared that he knew nothing of it and that the gem was put in his luggage by some one to ruin him. He declared the count is angry because he refused to [illegible] to sue for divorce.

In the American colony the case has attracted unusual attention for the reason that the wives of both men are Americans. LAWYER HIT BY STRAY BULLET IN SUBWAY SHOOTING.

Back Bay Attorney Wounded by Brown, Who Killed Queen Last Tuesday.

FACT KEPT A SECRET UNTIL YESTERDAY

Francis R Jones, a prominent attorney with offices at No. 84 State street, is lying at his home, No. 301 Marlboro street, with a bullet wound in his leg as a result of the murder of Charles Queen by Henry A Brown in the Park street station of the subway last Tuesday

The police who, after considerable "scrutinizing," discovered the identity of the wounded man, have been trying to effect entrance to the house for the purpose of summoning Mr Jones as a witness against Brown, but so far without success. His identity remained a secret until yesterday.

When the shooting occurred Mr. Jones was waiting for a car. Brown fired five shots, at least one of which went wild, striking Mr. Jones in the right thigh.

Although bleeding profusely, the lawyer managed to get out of the subway, unnoticed, in the excitement. He hailed a cabman and told him he wanted to go to his home in Marlboro street. The cabman was afraid the blood would stain the cushions in the cab and he feared to allow Mr Jones to ride until the latter had promised to hold his wounded leg outside the door during the trip.

The cabman drove Mr. Jones to the office of a physician, where the wound was dressed, and then drove him home. Mr. Jones' wound, though painful, will not cause permanent injury, and it is expected that he will be out in a week or ten days. He had a narrow escape, however, as the bullet barely missed the femoral artery.

Thomas O Brien, the cabman who drove him home, when questioned by a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN reporter, gave the following account of his share in the episode:

"Last Tuesday I was driving up Tremont street and was stopped near Stuart's place by a man who was limping. The man asked me to take him home. His right leg was bleeding near the thigh and I told him that I was afraid he would soil the upholstery of my carriage.

"He said he would hold his leg out of the cab door so that the blood would not drop into the cab and I told him to get in. He stepped into the cab and gave me his address—No. 301 Marlboro street.

"He was dripping blood and I asked him if I should not take him to Dr Goldthwaite, who is a specialist in gun shot wounds. He replied that he would see Dr Davis, who was a neighbor of his.

"I asked him how the accident happened and he replied that the fellow didn't mean to hit me but was trying to shoot a colored fellow. That is all I know about the affair."

Charcoal Kills Bad Breath

Bad Odor of Indigestion, Smoking, Drinking or Eating Can Be Instantly Stopped.

Sample Package Mailed Free.

Other people notice your bad breath where you would not notice it at all. It is nauseating to other people to stand before them and while you are talking, give them a whiff or two of your bad breath. It usually comes from food fermenting on your stomach. Sometimes you have it in the morning —that awful sour, bilious, bad breath. You can stop that at once by swallowing one or two Stuart Charcoal Lozenges, the most powerful gas and odor absorbers ever prepared.

Sometimes your meals will reveal themselves in your breath to those who talk with you. "You've had onions," or "You've been eating cabbage," and all of a sudden you belch in the face of your friend. Charcoal is a wonderful absorber of odors, as everybody knows. That is why Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are so quick to stop all gases and odors of odorous foods, or gas from indigestion.

Don't use breath perfumes. They never conceal the odor, and never absorb the gas that causes the odor. Besides, the very fact of using them reveals the reason for their use. Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges in the first place stop for good all sour brash and belching of gas, and make your breath pure, fresh and sweet, just after you've eaten. Then no one will turn his face away from you when you breathe or talk; your breath will be pure and fresh, and besides your food will taste so much better to you at your next meal. Just try it.

Charcoal does other wonderful things, too. It carries away from your stomach and intestines all the impurities there massed together and which causes the bad breath. Charcoal is a purifier as well as an absorber.

Charcoal is now by far the best, most easy and mild laxative known. A whole boxful will do no harm; in fact, the more you take the better. Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are made of pure willow charcoal and mixed with just a faint flavor of honey to make them palatable for you, but not too sweet. You just chew them like candy. They are absolutely harmless.

Get a new, pure, sweet breath, fresh en your stomach for your next meal, and keep the intestines in good working order. These two things are the secret of good health and long life. You can get all the charcoal necessary to do these wonderful but simple things by getting Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges. We want you to test these little wonder workers yourself before you buy them. So send us your full name and address for a free sample of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges. Then after you have tried the sample, and been convinced, go to your druggist and get a 25c box of them. You'll feel better all over, more comfortable, and "cleaner" inside.

Send us your name and address today and we will at once send you by mail a sample package, free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 60 Stuart Bldg., Marshall. Mich

DEFYING COLD AND DISCOMFORT HUNDREDS OF Society Women Enthusiasts In Autos See Great Cup Race

Many Pass Night in Cars, Wrapped in Furs and Blankets, to Get Good Positions.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

New York, Oct. 6.—One of the most attractive features of the great auto race was the number of society women who witnessed the contest from seats in the grand stand or from their own autos which they drove to the course.

So filled with automania were these women that they preferred to pass the night in their cars, wrapped in rugs, furs and blankets, and stand the discomforts of a fog and drizzling rain, rather than lose a moment of the exciting contest. First come, first served, was the rule and those whose autos were early on the scene were rewarded for an uncomfortable night by having the best places from which to see the race.

Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt, Jr. wife of the promoter of the race and donor of the cup, was on hand, and occupied a seat in the stand, from which she watched the racers with keen interest. With her was Mrs. Peter D. Martin, who was Miss Lily Oelrichs, an enthusiastic autoist. Mrs. Thomas Hastings watched the race from behind the rail, chatting meanwhile with Herman Duryea.

Prominent among the spectators were Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock who watched the contest from a private stand erected on their estate, which borders the course. Among their Boston guests were Mr and Mrs. R. L. Agassis and Max Norman.

Flora A. Fuller came over the road from Boston in a Packard touring car, with a party of friends, and Miss Bertha Fuller drove her Packard runabout.

HULL VOTES FOR MORAN IN POLL OF CITIZENS.

Gives Him Plurality Over Guild in Canvass for the Sunday American.

E. GERRY BROWN TOWN'S CHOICE BY TWO TO ONE

"As Hull goes so goes the State."

If this old saying is true, as it proved to be in the Russell campaigns of 1902, 1904 and 1905, and again in 1906 when Democrats run for Governor, then there is no doubt as to the election of District Attorney John B. Moran as the next Governor of the Commonwealth.

The BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN has made a poll of the voters of the old town with this result

Interviews by Sunday American	1270
For Moran	1135
For Guild	135
Changes in Guild vote now for Moran	15

For Brown	1250
For Draper	710

The vote of the town for Bartlett was 325 and for Guild 152. For Lieutenant-Governor Wallace received 174 votes and Draper 80.

The old town has been lucky in indicating the election of Governors in this State, and thousands watch the ballots eagerly to get the news from Hull. Just as soon as the vote is announced then the good Democrats fire bonfires.

Hull as an election barometer is more accurate than the weather bureau, as past elections go to show. In 1884 the town gave Cleveland and Hendricks 200 and in 1888 the town gave for Harrison and he won it and four years later Hull said "four years more of Grover."

Since then Hull has always been with the winner, and prior to that up to 1852

WAGE EARNERS OF ADAMS FOR BROWN

The candidacy of E. Gerry Brown, Independence League and Democratic nominee for Lieutenant-Governor, is proving strong in the Western section of the State. John H. Kenyon writes to Mr. Brown that at the next meeting of the Wage Earners and C. L. U., of Adams, of which he is president, Mr. Brown will be indorsed.

Peter Culen, jr., president of the C. L. U. of Pittsfield, says the sentiment among the union men of that city is all for Brown and that organized labor will make a great campaign for him.

SAY PLATT IS SOON TO QUIT THE SENATE

Washington, Oct. 6.—It is reported here on authority very close to Senator Thomas C. Platt of New York that he will shortly tender his resignation as United States Senator to the governor of New York. The venerable statesman has decided to take this course, it is said, on account of his failing health. For more than a year he has been unable to walk with out assistance, and the recent disclosures of his unhappy domestic relations, and the consequent mental anguish, have increased his weakness and brought him to a serious physical condition.

A Reasonable Plea For The Stomach

If Your Stomach is Lacking in Digestive Power, Why Not Help the Stomach Do Its Work—Especially When It Costs Nothing To Try!

Not with drugs, but with a reinforcement of digestive agents, such as are naturally at work in the stomach. Scientific analysis shows that digestion requires pepsin, nitrogenous ferments, and the secretion of hydrochloric acid. When your food fails to digest, it is proof positive that some of these agents are lacking in your digestive apparatus.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets contain nothing but these natural elements necessary to digestion and when placed at work in the weak stomach and small intestines, supply what these organs need. They stimulate the gastric glands and gradually bring the digestive organs back to their normal condition.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been subjected to critical chemical tests at home and abroad and are found to contain nothing but natural digestives

I have analyzed most carefully a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets (which I bought myself at a city chemist's shop) of the name, manufactured by the F. A. Stuart Co., Temple Chambers, London, E. C., and have to report that I cannot find any trace of vegetable or mineral poisons. Knowing the ingredients of the tablets, I am of opinion that they are admirably adaptable for the purpose for which they are intended. (Signed)

There is no secret in the preparation of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. Their composition is commonly known among physicians, as is shown by the recommendations of 40,000 licensed physicians in the United States and Canada. They are the most popular of all remedies for indigestion, dyspepsia, water brash, insomnia, loss of appetite, melancholia, constipation, dysentery and kindred diseases originating from improper dissolution and assimilation of foods, because they are thoroughly reliable and harmless to man or child.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are at once a safe and a powerful remedy; one grain of these tablets being strong enough (by test) to digest 3,000 grains of steak, eggs and other foods. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest your food for you when your stomach can't.

Ask your druggist for a fifty cent package or send to us direct for a free trial sample package and you will be surprised at the result. F. A. Stuart Co., 64 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

IT LOOKS GOOD TO ME

SENATOR LODGE, IF YOU PLEASE, SIR

LEAGUE WILL WAGE LIVELY CAMPAIGN.

Great Enthusiasm Shown for Candidates of Independence Movement.

SUPPORT IS ASSURED FROM ALL OVER STATE

The executive committee of the Independence League of Massachusetts was in session all day Saturday afternoon, and took action on a number of matters relative to the prosecution of the campaign throughout the State.

The officers of the League were enthusiastic in their reports of the campaign work, and said

"We are laying the great chains to be found in the strength of our own ticket," said President William N. Osgood, "that there is every indication that the Republican machine is doomed. If their speeches at Friday's convention can be taken to mean anything, have failed utterly to gauge the sentiment in the State. You would think, to read the report of the speech of acceptance, that we expected it would be necessary to call out the militia and to-morrow to prevent an anti-Guild uprising, while Senator Murray Crane and others talked as if the reading of the people who desire to return to the original American ideas of government by the people was something akin to Russian nihilism.

History Repeating Itself.

"History parades itself, and the modern Tories are again crying, 'Treason! Treason!' just as they did when Patrick Henry made his famous speech. We can answer, as he did, 'If that be treason, make the most of it,' and the people of Massachusetts are going to answer the cry at the polls on the sixth of next month, or I am no judge of public feeling."

State Secretary Davis received a big batch of letters and telegrams from different sections of the State yesterday, and after he had sweated from the last load of correspondence he seemed particularly cheerful.

"Every report makes things look bright," he said to a BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICA reporter. "There isn't a section of Massachusetts—and I don't except the Tory-like extreme western part of the State and other points formerly looked upon as strongholds of the opposition, from which we receive discouragement.

"In one of the shoe factories in Haverhill, in a room in which fifty-seven voters were employed, a majority of them being Republicans, a straw ballot was taken yesterday as to their preferences for Governor. The vote stood: Guild, 21; Moran, 36."

Enthusiasm for E. Gerry Brown.

"The enthusiasm isn't confined to the candidate for the head of the ticket. The feeling over the candidate for second place is equally pronounced. In a number of cities and towns labor organizations have already formally indorsed his candidacy and pledged their members, irrespective of party affiliations, to work for his success, in accordance with the advice of the American Federation of Labor to elect, wherever possible, a man with a union card.

"Meetings have been called in many other places, in which the same action will be taken. You will find organized labor and workingmen generally lined up solidly in this section day for Mr. Brown. Draper's labor record is too well known for him to have a chance against such a man as Brown with the working record and we are predicting safely that for the first time since the Civil War Massachusetts is not going to elect a Republican lieutenant-governor this year.

"We are being flooded with requests for speakers from all over the State, which we are supplying as far as possible. It is a gratifying feature of the situation that we are also receiving many offers of assistance from speakers of ability, who are expressing their willingness to assist in any manner possible in the League's work on the stump."

Mr. Brown Hopes for Success.

Candidate E. Gerry Brown had this to say last night: "I am ready to make an energetic and aggressive campaign for the ticket and since I have been given second place, and I believe I shall win the election.

"I, personally, am not the issue. The issue is the people against the forces of plutocrats, against which the people of this country are rising, and I happen to be one of the individuals selected to represent our principles. But it is for you voters, not men, that the voters will cast their ballots in November, and I am sanguine of the success of the ticket."

INDEPENDENCE LEAGUE BRANCH IN ROSLINDALE

Stirred to action by the signal success of the Independence League candidates at the Democratic convention, a large number of sympathizers of the new movement in Ward 23 held an enthusiastic meeting in Roslindale last evening and formed a branch of the League. Representative citizens from Forest Hills, West Roxbury, Jamaica Plain and other sections of the ward attended the meeting and enthusiastically passed the same resolutions as were adopted at the convention of the League.

John A. Keniry a prominent member of the Wage Earners' Club of Roslindale, was elected president, with F. H. Gallo as vice president and C. R. Wyman as secretary and treasurer. Mr. Keniry in accepting the office of president of the Roslindale Boston branch, said:

"I always have been independent in my politics and I know that there are a great many voters who have refused to join the Democratic party, but our independent ticket was gone for naught because we were not united. Democrats, however, can no longer continue to be a factor in our politics, because the principles which we have declared are practically independent. Let us work together. I am sure that in Ward 23 the League will have the largest membership roll of any ward in the city, just as soon as the doctrines of the new party can be properly expounded."

Representative John J. [illegible] sent a note of regret to the committee on organization, in which he expressed the sentiments of his hearty approval of the League, and at the meeting an executive committee will be elected

QUINCY-GASTON RULE IS NO MORE

Work and Vote for Moran and Brown

Every Man Must Take His Place on the Firing Line This Year—for or Against the Foes of Those Who Toil for a Livelihood

The BOSTON AMERICAN hopes that every Democratic and independent citizen of Massachusetts will vote for John B. Moran as Governor and E. Gerry Brown as Lieutenant-Governor. This newspaper hopes, not only that all these citizens will vote for these candidates, but it urges them TO ORGANIZE, TO WORK, TO SPEAK, TO CONVERT ALL THEIR NEIGHBORS INTO VOTERS FOR THESE CANDIDATES.

If you wish to help but do not know how, write at once to the BOSTON AMERICAN and you will be given every opportunity to join the campaign against the organization of the trusts and predatory corporations.

This will be the most important campaign of many years in this Commonwealth. Every man must take his place on the firing line. It is the most important campaign, because here as elsewhere in the United States, the FOES OF MEN AND WOMEN WHO WORK FOR THEIR BREAD or conduct business on a small scale are making a last, desperate stand to keep grasp upon the special privileges, their control of legislatures—State and national, which have enabled them to ENRICH THEMSELVES AT THE EXPENSE OF THE COMMUNITY.

Massachusetts and New York are the battle grounds of 1906. From a "sure" Republican State, this Commonwealth was made debatable ground by the demand of the people for the nomination of John B. Moran, a candidate whose personal honesty, courage and independence is beyond question. The enemy are the combined railroads, gas and electric lighting companies, the Elevated road of Boston, and every grabbing corporation.

IT IS THE PUBLIC DUTY OF EVERY PATRIOTIC CITIZEN TO VOTE FOR MORAN AND BROWN.

Governor Curtis Guild, Jr., has been false to the workingman, subservient to corporations, weak and vacillating and the maker of unfit appointments. Governor Guild secretly had his friends kill the Overtime Bill, which would absolutely prevent mill owners from forcing women and children wearily to toil at night. HE REWARDED THE MAN WHO KILLED IT WITH AN APPOINTMENT TO THE BENCH OF THE SUPERIOR COURT.

Vote against Eben S. Draper for Lieutenant-Governor because he has enslaved employes of the Hopedale mills—because he has DENIED THEM THE RIGHTS OF FREE MANHOOD and made petitions and votes for his political advancement a requisite for the privilege of earning pay in the plant that makes him a millionaire.

Guild and Draper are before the people on a "Stand Pat" platform. Its planks really are:

"WORK WOMEN AND CHILDREN AT NIGHT.

"NO SHORTER HOURS FOR THE WORKINGMAN.

"LET WELL ENOUGH ALONE—DON'T INTERFERE WITH THE CORRUPTION OF THE LEGISLATURE BY THE CORPORATION LOBBY."

A. F. OF L. TO TAKE STAND ON POLITICAL QUESTIONS

Lawrence, Oct. 6.—The Massachusetts branch of the American Federation of Labor will begin its twenty-fifth annual convention in City Hall here on Monday. Lawrence will hold "open house" to the 200 delegates during the four days of the convention.

They will be welcomed to the city by Mayor John P. Kane. Among the entertainments arranged for hours of leisure are visits to the big mills, and a banquet which will be held on Tuesday evening.

To Be Biggest Convention.

It is expected that this will be the largest convention ever held by the State branch. Among those who will deliver orations is President Henry Maloney of the Lawrence Central Labor Union. Great interest is taken in the annual reports of President Francis J. Clarke of Brockton and Secretary-Treasurer D. D. Driscoll of Boston.

E. Gerry Brown, Independence League and Democratic candidate for Lieutenant-Governor who has never missed an organized labor convention held in Massachusetts for twenty-five years; Frank K. Foster, due home on Monday from his duties as delegate to the British Trades Congress in England, and Joseph Seddon of Fall River, president of the Textile Workers of America, will be among the prominent labor leaders who will be present.

Among matters to be considered are the overtime and picketing bills and the determination of the American Federation of Labor to take an active hand in politics for the good of workingmen. It is believed that the convention may take action on such questions as the initiative and the referendum.

Another important matter for convention action is the anti-injunction bill to be presented to the next Legislature. Delegates D. D. Driscoll and Wm. Meyers of the Boston Central Labor Union have the matter in hand.

Since the last convention, twenty-six more local unions have affiliated, making the total in the State 276. The Legislative Committee, Frank K. Foster, chairman, will report the labor measure record of all State Senators and Representatives.

Will Transact Important Business.

The measures the convention will consider are of supreme importance to the cause of workingmen. The policy of the Wage Earners' clubs is likely to be outlined.

President Robert Maloney of the Lawrence C. L. U. will call the convention to order. Business sessions will be held Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. For Tuesday several interesting events are scheduled. One is an address by a representative of the Woman's Suffrage League. Another is the nomination of officers, who will be elected Wednesday by Australian balloting. No contest against the present officers is looked for.

FEENEY NEW DEMOCRATIC STATE CHIEF

Moran Men Now in Complete Control of Political Machinery.

7 RESIGNATIONS IN ALL

The Quincy Gaston Democratic machine formally surrendered its control of the State Committee to the friends of John B. Moran yesterday when the committee held its first meeting since the Democratic State Convention, at the Revere House.

The committee accepted the resignations of Josiah Quincy as chairman, and Quincy and Col. William A. Gaston as members. John F. Feeney of Woburn, who was permanent chairman of the State Convention, was elected to membership on the committee and was elected by the committee as the chairman to take the place of Quincy. Seven resignations in all were accepted, leaving the committee in the hands of the friends of Mr. Moran.

The list of resignations is headed by Chairman Josiah Quincy himself.

John C. Burke and Arthur Lyman, who served on the committee of "seven archery" with Mr. Quincy, also resign from the committee, as does John R. Thayer of Worcester, who unwittingly put a damper on Henry M. Whitney's aspirations for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

Gaston With Quincy.

Colonel William A. Gaston, true to tradition, accompanies Mr. Quincy in his political destiny, and Robert M. Burnett and Edward F. McSweeney completes the list. Mr. McSweeney does not have to resign, as he was defeated for re-election to the committee at the recent primaries by Richard Sullivan of Ward 10.

Daniel F. Buckley has handed in his resignation as treasurer of the committee, but retains his membership.

Chairman Josiah Quincy of the State committee gave out a statement after the meeting. He said:

"After the adjournment of the last meeting of the State committee the five members-at-large whose resignations were presented and accepted to-day, viz., Gaston, Burnett, Thayer, Burke and myself, are not, so far as I am informed, holding the Democratic State ticket, either officially or collectively.

"We are simply recognizing the fact that Mr. Moran and Mr. Williams, in making practically a clean sweep of the eighteen members-at-large of the State committee last year, notified the rest of the conservatives that their further representation in the party organization, save as a minority, is not desired.

"It is the undoubted right of the present leaders to take this position, and we have no fault to find with their action. We simply accept the logic of the situation created by them and decline to participate further where we are not wanted.

"It should be stated that Mr. Thayer presented his resignation from the committee at its first meeting in January, so he is merely carrying out the desire then expressed at that time, and also that, independent of all political considerations, I should think it proper to resign my membership on the committee at the present time, in view of the fact that Mayor Fitzgerald has signified me a member of the transit commission."

WEEKS ONCE MORE NAMED IN 12TH DISTRICT.

The Republicans of the Twelfth District, in convention at Wesleyan Hall yesterday, unanimously renominated Congressman John W. Weeks for a second term.

George L. Barnes of Weymouth was permanent chairman and E. W. Baker of Brookline, secretary.

LABOR'S STERN REBUKE WAITS EBEN S. DRAPER AT THE POLLS

PROTESTS HOPEDALE AUTOCRACY

Workingmen to Express Denunciation of Coercion of Employes.

RECITAL OF CONDITIONS

Worcester, Oct. 6. Eben S. Draper, Republican candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, will hear from organized labor in Worcester on election day. The amazing facts relative to the real conditions under which men work at Hopedale are just beginning to reach the rank and file of the labor element of this section.

To a reporter of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN a workman who was formerly employed in the factory of the Drapers at Hopedale, to-day told a story that shows the czar-like manner in which the employes of that town are controlled. Here is the real situation, so far as the employes of the Draper company are concerned, as related by this man who was discharged because he had the temerity to ask for a nine-hour day instead of a ten-hour day.

An employe must not belong to a union.

An employe must not ask for an increase of pay or a shorter working day.

An employe must vote for Eben S. Draper.

The facts about union labor being impossible at Hopedale were pretty generally known here, as well as the danger that confronted the employe who attempted to have the conditions laid down by the company changed. But the knowledge that last year, after the nomination of Eben S. Draper for Lieutenant-Governor, a paper was circulated through the factory for signatures approving him for that place, with the implied penalty for the man who did not sign the loss of his job, came to the working people of Worcester as a revelation as to how completely the Drapers dominate the people who enter their employ.

Tells of Tyranny.

At his home in this city a man who had felt the heavy hand of the Drapers—who was summarily dismissed for daring to ask shorter hours—told his experience. The name of the man is not given here because he believes that if it were published the long arm of the powerful Hopedale family would reach out and injure him, even where he is employed now.

This man will not vote for Eben S. Draper. He says that none of his fellow-workmen who are cognizant of the facts at Hopedale will do so, regardless of their political predilections. This is his remarkable story:

"I read in the HUSTON AMERICAN about the conditions that really exist at Hopedale. What was published was in no way exaggerated. I know that from personal experience. The facts ought to be presented to the public so they can see that a town owned and ruled by the iron hands of the Drapers. For years all that has been printed about Hopedale and the Drapers has been in favor of the town and in laudation of the Drapers.

"I was particularly interested in the statement about the attempt to get a nine-hour day there. I know all about that. I was one of the men who tried to get it through and I was one of the men who 'got through' as a result. I want to say right here that I do not consider it a misfortune that I got discharged. I think that a man ought to consider himself fortunate who is able to get out of Hopedale and secure another job.

"I have still a copy of the heading to the petition and I want to have it produced to let the public judge for themselves if it contained anything that justified the treatment to which we were subject at that time."

The heading to the petition was as follows:

To the Directors of the Draper Company.

We the undersigned employes of Dept. No. ..... in the employ of the Draper Company believing the present prosperous condition of business to warrant the request, and in view of the fact that many large manufacturing concerns have voluntarily granted the same, do hereby petition the directors of said Draper Company for a reduction in the number of hours, the same to be fixed at nine hours, receiving for the same the present ten hours pay.

We also state that this request is made without connection with or reference to any labor organization.

We also state that this is not originated for any political purpose.

Attention is especially called to the two concluding paragraphs. The request was not made in connection with labor organizations because the men knew how the Drapers stood with reference to the man with a union card. It was not made as a political threat, but simply as an act of justice. The discharged workman tells the rest of the story:

2,500 "Favored" Eben.

"Shortly after Eben S. Draper was nominated for Lieutenant-Governor a paper was circulated through the factory for signatures advocating his election as a fine fellow and a man. No demand, of course, was made that every person sign the paper, but the impression got abroad that it would be fatal to the man who did not do so.

"I and some others did not sign the petition as we believed that our political freedom should not be taken away from us in this high-handed manner. But when the petition was finished there were about 2,500 names on it. Practically all of the employes in the factory had at least their signatures to it.

"It was after this petition had been circulated that I and some others thought that we would be at liberty to ask for a nine-hour day instead of a ten-hour day. We had some literature typewritten and began their circulation. But it was not long before those in charge of the factory heard of the move and somehow they got hold of the petition, which showed a large number of names on it, and they actually destroyed it.

"We were indignant. We determined that we would not submit and had a number of headings printed so that blank paper for signatures could be pasted on about 200 names were signed to this. [The same petition that is given above.]

Discharge Threatened.

"I was called to the office to explain. They asked me how and where the petition originated. I told them. They insisted that some union was back of the matter, but I told them that it was not true. Howard Bracken, assistant superintendent, said:

"'Anybody caught with this petition will be discharged.'

"That was the word that was allowed to go through the factory. Of course everybody who had one of the petitions, and who wanted to keep his job, kept as quiet as possible. But it soon found that they had it in for me.

"A man who worked in the factory came to my house at night and gave me to understand that he would be willing to sign such a petition. I knew that he was a spy and that he had been sent there for the purpose of finding out whether I had any of the petitions in possession, as well as to ascertain if there was any connection between me and any labor organization.

"I gave the man no information. When there were as many signatures as I thought we could obtain I carried the petition to Superintendent Nutting. I do not know what became of it then—it was probably tossed into the waste basket. I only know that I was discharged and that the men never got the nine-hour day.

I want to say here, and I say it without fear of contradiction by anybody who knows what he is talking about, that a man has no freedom, political or otherwise, who works at Hopedale.

An employe must not belong to a union.

An employe must not ask for an increase of pay or shorter working day.

An employe must vote for Eben S. Draper.---Hopedale conditions as described by a former employe.

The Confidence the Public Reposes in This Store

IS ONE of the chief reasons why it is such a success—why the business grows so steadily and so healthily.

Keeping faith with the public is one of the most important planks in Mr. Henry Siegel's platform of business principles.

Had he failed to keep faith with the public in any essential particular he would not have been able to rear such magnificent and successful stores in New York and Chicago as he has done.

The success of his Boston Store is an emphatic indorsement of the aggressive, progressive and popular methods he employs to promote a great and worthy business.

Keep faith with the public. Win its absolute confidence is the slogan of the store, and it means worlds. Thousands of people know the store; know how handsome it is, how clean and inviting; what an air of dignity and comfortable attractiveness it possesses; how excellent the stocks; how superior the service. But there are also many persons not so well acquainted with us. These we want to know and show.

The Anniversary Sale proved the store's popularity. The Challenge Sale supplied new and pleasanter proof. It proved the Henry Siegel Co. store's supremacy also. Not a competitor answered its challenge to meet its prices.

Confidence! You may buy in perfect confidence at this store. If anything is wrong we will quickly right it. Money promptly refunded.

All you have to do is to bring the goods back and ask for the money.

For this week we have planned on a most extensive scale. Many of the values will be even greater than those advertised for the Challenge Sale. It is simply another example of progressive storekeeping.

PROFIT TAKING A FEATURE OF TRANSACTIONS IN STOCK MARKET

Tone Irregular, Some of the Active Stocks Lower While Gains Are Made by Many Issues During Past Week

The stock market yesterday was irregular. The active stocks lost and the inactive stocks gained.

All of the gains are small in advance, but a number of the declines of the shares traded in. It was another market of a hand to hand exchanging hands.

Wall Street, and especially the public at large, are restless and uncertain. There is no reason for any decline in stocks. There are causes, however, and the chief of these is profit-taking. The late rise in many securities is unsound and general profit taking is natural. If the prices of stocks are to go and it is said on good authority that the big men in the Stock Exchange stocks are bought and sold on a large scale, not often for a few points, but changes bring the profits and the loss must be heavy.

Reading Still the Leader.

Reading was (of course) active by the market leader yesterday, with transactions of 314 000 shares. It lost 1 point. Steel common was the next of 65,000 attempts at fluctuations it it held fairly firm against them, and lost only ⅜ of a point. Amalgamated Copper became of extra interest but a point in a wide swing. Union Pacific went 1 point higher than last Friday's close, but lost ½ cents per share less from $114 ⅜ up.

Union Pacific continued its unwanted state of being almost ignored, but the manipulators succeeded in driving it down a half point, to 196⅝, which is but no very low in view of the strength shown by the so-called inactive group. To the 7 potent facts of the week, which had been forgotten also it is due not to be overlooked with the stocks of railroads are sensitive. Tennessee Coal & Iron jumped up 7 points on one or two buying orders amounting to all 1,000 shares and forced all Pacific stocks up, on a better tone to orders.

The financial standing strikingly showed where least capital failed to benefit the market leaders, out of which the "professionals" were trying to get a half a dozen points per share.

Harriman Stocks Advance.

Speculative sentiment last night, however seemed to reflect more confidence in the stock market. Monetary conditions both at home and abroad are improved, although the specific issues of yesterday's bank statement was unfavorable, the banks having nearly $4,000,000 surplus. The market interests nevertheless, are still taking conservatively regarding the immediate outlook and will doubtless continue to wait.

The advance in the Harriman Pacific stocks shows that either the interests identified with them are receptive, or that powerful outsiders are willing them on to greater success. It is not gossip in stockdom that these stocks were steadily absorbed by interests in London, and that many rails have also been bought on this theory by New York speculators of large means. Both Mr. Rockefeller and John W. Gates have been inspired by the 7th coming annual report and by the belief that stocks was quoted very low for its 10 per cent dividend. Absorption of south Pacific is based on its 6 per cent dividend and on prospective gains of reasonable value. It is reported that the stockholders will be given the privilege of subscribing in a large issue of Southern Pacific preferred.

Heavy Buyers of Steel.

There has been a good deal of adverse comment on the readjustment of Steel preferred. There is truth, however, to be found that there is truth behind the recently developed theory that Steel preferred has been purposely held down while the company was being accumulated by Morgan, Hill, Rick and other capitalists who are parties to the much-talked-of and now completed ore deal. All the interests identified with the ore deal have been heavy buyers recently of Steel preferred. The result was, of course, the principal event of the week.

There is no difference of opinion as to whether the special preliminary announcement regarding the deal will meet with favorable response in the market as a whole as well as in the steel stocks and great Northern preferred, but the effect should be at least stimulating. The United States Steel corporation has acquired by lease the Great Northern ore properties, so-called, and is to pay $1.65 per ton for ore, the price to be increased 5 cents per ton in each succeeding year. The duration of the lease is not stated, but it will undoubtedly extend to the time when all the ore has been mined.

As was stated in the Boston Financial News yesterday, authorities in the steel trade have maintained all along that the relations between the Steel corporation and the Great Northern Railway company were such that the consummation of the ore deal was only a matter of time, and in such months and even years might be even before the two interests actually signed the formal agreements which have been pending for a long time.

Big Deals Expected.

Many who are looking for greater activity and higher prices believe that not only the ore deal but other important deals, about which there have been many rumors, will be highly important factors in sustaining the market during the next two or three months. They believe that the actual assignment of the lease of the Hill ore properties by the Steel corporation will consummate identical interests that the rumors with respect to several of the largest railroad systems will soon materialize in actual transactions, the importance of which will be found to be greater than is even now surmised.

It is positively stated that the buying of Union Pacific and Southern Pacific and Reading for some weeks has been of a character equally as good as that which took place prior to the announcement of the Union Pacific and Southern Pacific dividends and the raising on $2 increase additional St. Paul stock. It would not surprise many observers to hear that rights will be offered to both Union Pacific and Southern Pacific stockholders. The published details as to the authorization of a further large amount of St. Paul stock are regarded as largely technical. Some railroad interests which have been quiet throughout this week that additional stock was authorized at the St. Paul meeting are now predicting that rights on the new issue will be offered to shareholders within the next ninety days.

Local Copper Stocks.

The local copper stocks were strong yesterday, with trading active and on a broad scale. Old Dominion was an early feature, advancing to a new high record of 58⅜, up 1⅜. The stock then proceeded to gain still further, and closed at 60¼, up 2⅜. It is said that Old Dominion earned more than $100,000 last month, in excess of all construction cost. The annual meeting of the Arizona Consolidated Company comes Wednesday, but it is not expected that

PUBLIC CRAZY OVER MINING STOCKS

Bank Statement Unfavorable, but Money Market Shows Improvement—Old Dominion Attains New Maximum Record

New York, Oct. 6.—Wall street and the entire country is trading in mining stocks in volume never before equalled. The strange feature of the situation is that many of the stocks can be sold at higher prices than the level at which they were bought. This unusual fact is inspiring fresh purchases from day to day.

Copper and the subject of mining have been the leading topics of discussion for many years. The regions being exploited by mining experts are actually producing rich ores. It is worth millions, but the value of stock in the market is supplied by mining experts to be only one-fourth of the value of the ore blocked out.

Several of the popular stocks are selling at full value of the ores that are blocked out, but they explain the high price by saying that in the past the properties were poorly exploited in the early days and this is true in many cases.

The influence of the men back of the active mining stocks is of the first importance. Charles M. Schwab and John W. Gates, the bitter being the Standard oil interests and Morgan interests are the principal stocks which in recent days would be considered beneath their notice. Railroad and Industrial stocks have been worn threadbare by the manipulating pools, and the mining world offers a fresh region of speculation.

That there will be a crash ultimately goes without saying, but some of the best informed authorities say that they expect a long campaign of wild speculation first. The tendency of the listed stocks on the New York Exchange seems to be toward higher levels.

What the Hon. W. F. PORTER, Ex-Secretary of the State of Nebraska, Says About

Chicago-New York Electric Air Line R. R. Co. Stock

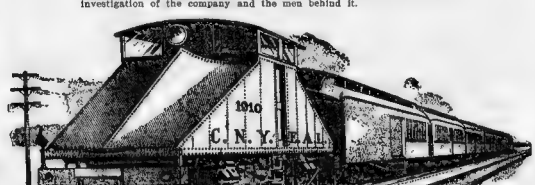
An Open Letter

In part, he says: "About the middle of July there appeared in a number of Chicago papers advertisements of the CHICAGO NEW YORK ELECTRIC AIR LINE RAILROAD COMPANY, which greatly interested myself and a number of my Nebraska friends. I decided to make a personal investigation of the company and its plans. I accordingly went to Chicago and spent several days looking up the men who had formed this company. Their plan I knew, from previous investigation, to be entirely feasible, consequently it was the men who were back of the company I was interested in looking up. Were they merely a band of promoters, trying to swindle the public, or were they experienced, practical and reliable business men, who could be trusted to carry out fairly and honestly that which they were undertaking? These were the questions I wanted answered satisfactorily. I found that the president of the company, Mr. Miller, was one of the responsible business men of Aurora, Ill., and an ex-railroad man of some 20 years' experience with the C., B. & Q. railroad; that the secretary and treasurer of the company was Theron M. Bates, one of the best known railroad men in Illinois, and former general superintendent of the Chicago & Alton railroad. That associated with them as directors and officers of the company were some of the most responsible business men of Illinois and Indiana. They had already spent a great deal of money making surveys through Indiana and Ohio, and securing the right-of-way. That instead of issuing bonds much in excess of the cost of building the road, as is usually done, the company had decided to make this a people's road, by selling stock direct to the individual citizen, on such terms as would enable the small investor to buy shares. My deliberate judgment is that stock will be selling above $50 per share in a short time, and that by the time the first 100 miles of the road is in operation, from Chicago to Goshen, Ind., that the stock will be at par, for the reason that there is no preferred stock, and every stock certificate bears on its face this clause. 'This certificate will be accepted in payment for transportation to the amount of the par value ofs the shares of stock represented hereby, and at current tariff rates, over any part of the road in operation.' This provision should prevent the stock selling at less than par. It may, however, be above par, depending on the earnings of the road Judging from the success of the Aurora, Elgin & Chicago electric road built some five years ago from Chicago to Aurora, there is every reason to expect that this stock will be worth, by the time the road is completed, not less than $200 per share. While this may sound extravagant, it is in reality a very conservative estimate. It is a well-known fact that there are no investments today that pay like railroad stock.

"This is no visionary plan or scheme, but good, hard horse sense. That the electrical railroad is to be the coming road, and that the railroad business of this country will be largely revolutionized thereby within the next 10 years, is believed by the best railroad men who have investigated the subject from a disinterested standpoint.

"I am going to put my own money into this stock, and I feel perfectly safe in saying to my friends and to others, it is the one chance of a lifetime to get in on the ground floor."

Mr. Porter is one of the ablest men in the country, a man whose judgment carries weight, for he is a shrewd, hard-headed, conservative business man with a reputation he would not jeopardize by expressing in emphatic, unqualified language just what he thinks about CHICAGO-NEW YORK ELECTRIC AIR LINE RAILROAD stock after a most thorough personal investigation of the company and the men behind it.



One of the Hundred-Mile-an-Hour Electric Engines That Will Take a Train to New York in 10 Hours.

The development of electrical power has been so rapid and marvelous that its possible future growth becomes a subject of fascinating interest. A few days ago this important item appeared in all the leading newspapers of the United States, and only emphasizes the fact that we are fast approaching the time when all transportation will be by electrical power:

CENTRAL'S ELECTRIC FLYER MAKES ITS FIRST TRIP.

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—The New York Central railroad's first electric train drawn by a 100-ton electric locomotive, was run to-day from High Bridge, seven miles from New York, where the present electric zone terminates, to the Grand Central station in this city. The train consisted of eight cars, and there were about 100 passengers aboard, including New York Central and other railroad officials. The test was pronounced satisfactory.

THE TREND OF THE TIMES could not be better indicated than by this stamp of approval upon the possibilities of electric traction by one of the largest railroad systems in America. Nothing could be a truer index to the certainty that electric power will be used by all new systems henceforth, and installed upon the old steam roads wherever the existing trackage is straight enough to permit high speed.

THE CHICAGO-NEW YORK ELECTRIC AIR LINE RAILROAD is now being built from the proceeds of the sales of its capital stock.

No bonds are to be issued to construct the road.

OUR STOCK PROPOSITION HAS MET WITH PUBLIC FAVOR. Our plans appeal to investors as not alone feasible and pratical, but as offering an exceptional opportunity for safe and profitable investment, of which many have been glad to avail themselves.

Attached to this announcement are two coupons. By the use of one you can purchase such number of shares as you may wish to contract for. The use of the other will bring to you further information.

Partial or instalment payments may be made at the rate of 10 per cent down, 10 per cent monthly until shares are paid for. At the present price of $26 per share, this means $2.60 per share in cash or its equivalent with your subscription and $2.60 per share each month for the next nine months.

No interest will be charged on deferred payments.

I'll Stake My Reputation on Searchlight Gold Beam

And Advise, with All Earnestness, the Immediate Purchase of This Stock Before the Advance.

The great rush of orders the past week proves that the investing public appreciates my efforts in letting them in on the ground floor. I am giving you the same opportunity to make money as a Gould, Vanderbilt, Clark, Schwab or any of the other multi-millionaires.

* * * * * *

Searchlight Gold Beam mine is not a lonely prospect in an unknown camp. There are fifty mines in Searchlight Camp and every one is a success—not a failure—not one.

The Quartette Mine has over Nine Million dollars worth of ore in sight. The Mohawk mine is said to be producing One Million dollars per month. The Tonopah mines have produced over $50,000,000. $100 invested in any one of many different mines we could mention in Nevada are said to have yielded their fortunate holders $5,000, $10,000, $25,000, $40,000, $60,000 and $90,000 each.

Five years ago these great mining properties were practically unknown, while today the scores of fortunes running into the hundreds of millions seem almost incredible but Nevada is now known as the richest mining district in the world.

Did you ever stop to think how much money you would make from a $100 investment in Searchlight should it prove as rich as the Mohawk? You would make about $50,000 per year, or about $4,000 per month! This sounds big, but it's a fact—one of the stubborn facts.

No one can realize the enormous possibilities of the Searchlight Gold Beam until he has seen the property, and then, after seeing Gold taken out assaying $250 to the ton, he begins to realize that this is a great mine.

You become enthusiastic, and as one man remarked, "I told my wife I should invest $500 in that property if I had to mortgage my house to do it."

$100 buys as much stock in Searchlight Gold Beam now as $500 will in a short time.

Sixth—Because you will never have an opportunity to buy this stock at so low a price again after it has once started to advance in price.

Seventh—Because the ore is free milling and assays at $250 per ton, while every miner knows that the Comstock lode is being worked at fabulous profits on ore that runs only about $6 a ton.

Eighth—Because of the success of Tonopah, Goldfield and Bull Frog, and the fact that Searchlight is on the same geological formation.

Ninth—Because the Searchlight Gold Beam is located in what is known by all mining men as the Golden Triangle of Searchlight, Nevada, one of the greatest treasure storehouses of the Southwest, the district with fifty mines and not a single failure.

Tenth—Because two of the great transcontinental railroads have suddenly woke up to the enormous wealth now being produced at Searchlight, and are now rushing the completion of their lines right into the center of this great camp, where thousands of tons of ore are awaiting shipment.

* * * * * *

When the rich mining camp of Tonopah was opened a few years ago it was largely developed by capital from conservative Philadelphia investors. I want you to know that these investors have seen the stock which they bought for a few cents a share then now quoted at several dollars a share. Searchlight is as good now as Tonopah was then.

I want you to remember that some of the greatest fortunes in the world today have had their start originally from a small investment in mining. Why can you not be as fortunate? I believe you can.

Did you ever hear of the widow in Michigan whose husband owned a little grocery store and had to take 1,000 shares of Calumet & Hecla on a bad debt? That widow is a rich woman today. That 1,000 shares has paid her over $1,000,000 in dividends, and she could sell the stock at more than a million more. Think that over.

Again let me urge you to invest in Searchlight Gold Beam this week. Again, I say, and I personally assume the responsibility of the statement, that I am willing to stake my reputation by advising every man or woman who can raise $25, $100 or $500 to put it in Searchlight Gold Beam at 25 cents a share, and you will never regret it.

This allotment at this price is being eagerly subscribed for. It will require a quick decision on your part.

Very truly yours,

Lafayette E. Pike

Let Us Reason It Out Together---Facts Are Stubborn Things.

I want you to sit right down with me here and now and reason out the facts about this Searchlight Gold Beam mine as an investment and see why you should buy stock now at 2c. a share.

I believe that it pays to be honest. Other brokers say I am foolish because I am offering you Searchlight Gold Beam at 2c. a share, when I could just as well get 25c. a share, the same as my competitors. I am offering you 5,000 shares of Searchlight for $100, instead of $1,250, and I repeat the statement with all the emphasis and earnestness that I possess, that no man or woman can afford to miss this opportunity.

$25 buys 1,250 shares of Searchlight
$50 buys 2,500 shares of Searchlight
$100 buys 5,000 shares of Searchlight
$200 buys 10,000 shares of Searchlight
$500 buys 25,000 shares of Searchlight

Remember that the par value of this stock is $1 a share; that if you invest $100 now your $100 will be worth $1,250 when the stock goes to 25 cents (where it belongs now) and $5,000 when the stock goes to par!

That's why the other brokers say I am foolish because I am giving my clients too much for their money. Let us see. Let's reason it out!

I believe that the sale of this valuable stock at 2c. a share (a price that is ridiculously low), will prove the greatest advertisement that I could possibly have.

Don't you see, if I am the means of making a large amount of money FOR YOU and for all my clients who follow my advice, you will recommend me and the stocks I handle to others.

NOW, do you think I am foolish? If you buy Searchlight Gold Beam now on my advice and it goes to 25c., then to 50c. a share, and then to par YOU will not think so.

I want 1000 investors in Searchlight Gold Beam at once—the more people buy this stock now the bigger the advertisement it will be for me—incidentally, you will make money.

I have tried the experiment I was talking about last week, and I am satisfied I am right. The public DO want a good investment at 2c. a share.

Shall I Tell You the Reasons why bankers, merchants and business men are investing so heavily in this stock?

First—Because 2 cts. a share is not 50 cts. a share.

Second—Because $50,000,000 invested in Searchlight District the past thirty days by California capitalists means a rapid advance in stock.

Third—Because your holdings are bound to increase greatly in value at the price you are offered this stock.

Fourth—Because our property is located right in the heart of the most wonderful gold belt ever opened in the history of mining.

Fifth—Because this stock is bound to make a big advance within the next few days. If you invest $100 now the apparent profits would be $4,900 when it advanced to 25 cts.; $1,000 now, the profits would be $49,000.

REPORT OF JOHN D. CAMPBELL,

Nevada's Foremost Mining Engineer,

ON THE

Eagle's Nest Fairview Mining Company

Goldfield, Nev., Sept. 16, 1906

To the President and Directors
The Eagle's Fairview Mining Company,
Goldfield, Nevada.

GENTLEMEN:—

I beg to submit a brief report on the surface showings of the property owned by you in the Fairview District, consisting of the Tisson, Eagle's Nest No. 1, Lookout, and Lockout No. 1 claims.

This property is bounded on the north by the Dromedary Hump Mining Company, on the southeast by the Fairview Eagle Mining Company and the Nevada Hills Mining Company, and on the southwest by the Fairview Mining Company—in fact, it is in the center and surrounded by the best properties in Fairview.

My examination of this ground was made for the purpose of deciding where we should do our permanent work, and required quite a lot of consideration on account of the many good ledges which traverse our ground. I finally decided on a tunnel to be driven on a ledge which crosses the Tisson, where we found an excellent showing.

The tunnel starts at the base of the hill on which the ledge crops and will continue on its strike a distance of 150 feet to our objective point—the apex of the hill and directly under the location post of the Tisson. The ledge crops the entire distance and shows ore at the grass roots running $40 to $45 a ton. A second ledge running northeast and southwest and cropping for 200 feet, showing $30 to $40 a ton, will be intersected by this tunnel at a depth of over 100 feet.

On the Lookouts are several good-looking quartz ledges, which assay from a few dollars up, and which will be thoroughly prospected at once.

On the Eagle's Nest No. 2 there is a fine showing of manganese ore, and within a few feet of our line high grade shipping ore is being sacked on Wingfield's property.

In conclusion, I would state that in my opinion this is a first-class mining proposition and one of the very best showings in Fairview.

Respectfully submitted,
JOHN D. CAMPBELL,
Consulting Engineer, Vice-President and General Manager.

REPORT OF JOHN D. CAMPBELL,

Nevada's Foremost Mining Engineer,

ON THE

As-You-Like-It Manhattan Mining Company

Goldfield, Nev., Sept. 22, 1906

To the President and Directors
As-You-Like-It Manhattan Mining Company
Goldfield, Nevada.

GENTLEMEN:

In accordance with your instructions I beg to submit to you a brief report on the "As-You-Like-It" group of claims, owned by the As-You-Like-It Manhattan Mining Company, and situate in the Manhattan Mining District.

This group consists of four claims, namely: The "As-You-Like-It," "Lizzard Fraction," "Keystone" and "Jumper" lode mining claims, lying within a short distance of the Tulon No. 9 mine of the Dexter group and in the immediate locality of the Little Grey, Indian Camp, Stray Dog and other well known mining properties of the camp. The area of the property comprises approximately 60 acres of valuable mineral ground.

During the past month exhaustive surface exploration has been in progress, with the result that three veins of ore have been disclosed that prospect well at grass roots. With a view to exploring these veins at depth, three shafts have been put down, the deepest one having attained a depth of 39 feet. The bottom of this shaft shows values across its entire width and is all vein matter. This is known as the "As-You-Like-It" shaft, and will be continued as permanent [illegible] to [illegible] vertically below the [illegible] depth.

The "Jumper" shaft is down 32 feet and also prospects in gold for the entire width of the shaft. A depth of 17 feet has been reached on the shaft on the "Keystone" claim of the group, exploring a vein that traverses the Indian Camp mine and crops on the northwest portion of the "Keystone." This vein also shows gold in several different places along its strike.

The location of the property in the immediate vicinity of such well known and thoroughly proved mines as the Stray Dog, Indian Camp, Jumping Jack, Tulon No. 9 and Little Grey gives to it very great prospective value and warrants the prosecution of exhaustive development work so as to make a permanent dividend-paying proposition.

Respectfully submitted
JOHN D. CAMPBELL,
Consulting Engineer, Vice-President and General Manager.

Both of these stocks will be listed on the important exchanges of San Francisco, Salt Lake, Goldfield and New York immediately after subscriptions are closed, and will, beyond a doubt, at once command a premium. We recommend both stocks as high class speculative investments and probable big future dividend-payers.

Reservations should be made by telegraph, to insure consideration, and remittances in full, by bank draft or certified check, must be forwarded immediately after allotment is made. Otherwise allotment will be rendered void. The right is reserved to reduce or refuse any subscription tendered.

A stockholder of Copper Range says: "The data over for presentation in Copper Range as a result of manipulation, which characterized the first 6 months of the year, is a few specimens of the kind that are to be found in the list of stocks. The stock is a good one, and will undoubtedly be worth a few dollars more per share than it is now selling at, but it is a few specimens of the kind that are to be found in the list of stocks."

BIG DEALS IN REAL ESTATE ARE PENDING

Trading in the real estate market last week was almost of the average order. Brokers are waiting for something to occur to make business a bit brisker. There are numerous deals pending which will soon make themselves felt by increasing the number of transactions. Some interesting changes in ownership of realty, however, took place last week.

Transfers in the city proper include title to the investment estate in the South End purchased last April upon street and 76 to 82 Dartmouth street, assessed to Eugene H. Mahoney, who conveys to Morris Magdo a lot on the parcel is on Dartmouth street, $1,400. There are in the estate a brick three story building and 1,020 square feet of land. The land is rated on a basis of $3.50 per foot.

Big Winthrop Transfer.

The Edward P. Harrington Company has sold the large estate at Winthrop Highlands, belonging to Charles S. Burke, to Orient at 9 to 33 Temple avenue, comprising an eleven-room house, together with about nine-tenths of land, with a frontage of sixty-five feet. The purchaser is Dr. Moody, who has recently moved to Winthrop. He is also the owner of the estate No. 7 Temple avenue, and will probably locate in the house. The property is assessed for $7,000 and was bought for a little under that sum by the many of the private properties at the Highlands which in recent years have been completely modernized. Within a short time a greater activity than for the sale of court Park land will be carried on, when the new streets and also many more are opened. The firm has sold Mr. Thomas lot No. 8 Winthrop, containing 9,530 square feet with a frontage of 91½ feet on Court road and sixty feet on the water front. The property is assessed for twenty.

Reported by this company of the sale of the Mixer estate on Mt. Vernon street, Winthrop, consisting of a single house and a lot of land containing 6,000 square feet, at $3,800. The grantor is Sarah E. Mixer, and the purchaser, whose name is withheld at present, for the present occupies the house.

Sales Through the American.

O. W. Bartlett has sold, through the BOSTON AMERICAN, $18,000 worth of lots to 150 people at Glen Echo Lake, North Stoughton, since July 1, and twelve cottages have been built there this season. Most of the purchasers are working on their land, preparing to build next season, and it is expected that there will be a hundred houses at the end of next season in a territory that was a wilderness a little more than a year ago. Several front lots propose to erect artistic stone mansions or castles. Cottages have been built by Caleb J. Baird, Captain John Fitzgill, Messrs. Hane Merriamm, Joseph B. Holmes, Edward A. Robson, Jonathan W. Farrar, the Lenox Club, and Miss Pearl Irving, the actress. Mr. James R. Metaxa of Newport, R. I., has just bought twenty-five of the best lots and will build a cottage. Real estate along the shores of Hancock Bay is marked this Fall by considerable activity in comparison, the men of wealth and leisure securing from the old residents choice building frontage that is within immediate sight of the ocean. Another transfer of the Elderton L. Dorr estate to John Q. A. Whittemore is one among a number of transfers of grand properties in that section. The Dorr estate, called The Moorings, is delightfully situated. One of the many features of the property is the private driveway of half a mile from the State highway, through a forest to the gates. Few, if any of the many properties at Hancock Bay have the advantages of The Moorings in completeness of detail. The only reason for its sale was the absence of Mr. Dorr abroad. Mr. Dorr owned was the house.

Opportunity for Home Seekers.

At Wellington Hillside, Dorchester, an exceptional opportunity will be open for the next ten days through an innovation in the sale of house lots. On account of the steadily increasing value of this section of the city, agreements of purchase and sale will contain a clause giving to buyers the option, at the expiration of one year, of cancelling their purchase with return of all money paid on account, together with 5 per cent interest. This is an opportunity to acquire a lot for a home or investment unparalleled in the annals of Boston real estate.

Certificates of title guaranteed by the Title Guarantee & Trust Co. have been issued to the following buyers: The Misses Ford, 4,000 square feet on Land Allandale street; Conrad H. Schultz, 4,000 square feet of land on Glenarm street; Miss E. Thornton, 4,000 square feet of land, Tonawanda street; Evangeline Pendleton, 4,000 square feet of land, Orlando street; A. Cecil Pemberton, 4,000 square feet of land on same street.

Oakmount Park Improvements.

Brooks Real Estate Agency reports [illegible] sold for the sale of the Robert A. M[illegible] estate on Washington street, Brighton, comprising twenty-five acres and [illegible] set of buildings. The property [illegible] sold for $5,000 but the price is not mentioned. The buyer, a Boston gentleman, whose name is withheld at present, intends to occupy as a home. W. L. Baker of Somerville has taken title to a farm in Easton comprising thirty acres with stock and tools. A. P. Verrenzer was the grantee. Brock's Real Estate Agency made the sale.

Improvements which are taking place at Oakmount Park, Lexington, by the building of Hayes avenue, paving the gutters, and acceptance of Merriam street through the park, have resulted in an increased demand for property. The Edward T. Harrington Company report the sale of lot 5, fronting on Mt. Harper's avenue, near the junction of St. Francis and York streets, containing 13,000 square feet, and a frontage of 130 feet, owned by E. I. Henderson, to the purchaser, whose name will be given when the deeds pass.

Bank Sells Holdings.

Agreements are signed for the sale of the Cook place in West Mansfield, fronting on West street, containing 7 acres of arable and one acre of land. The property is located near the famous Greenwood

PROBE LAND FRAUD AND VOTE BUYING IN CANADA.

St. John, N. B., Oct. 6.—Prominent politicians belonging to the Conservative and Liberal parties in Canada are figuring in investigations now in progress. Evidence now being taken before the investigation of insurance companies has connected the names of George Foster, M. P.; George W. Fowler, M. P., for Kings-Albert, N. B. A. A. Lefurgey, M. P., of Summerside, P. E. I.; W. H. Bennett, M. P., of East Simcoe, Ont.; Rufus Pope, former member of Parliament from Compton, Que., and other members of the Conservative party. The evidence shows that these men were concerned in extensive land deals in the West.

On the Liberal side, Hon Charles Hyman, member of Parliament for London City, that is defendant in a suit brought by his political opponents in an attempt to unseat him on the ground that his agents and workers violated election laws by buying votes and committing other irregularities.

Lake. The purchaser's name and price will be given when the papers pass.

The receivers of the American National Bank have sold their holdings in Quincy, consisting of four parcels of real estate, lot 501 Hancock street and lots 2-24 and 2-25 Field street. The property was sold for all cash to a speculator, whose name will be given when deed is recorded. The sales were made by the Ladd and Tilton Investment Company.

Mrs. Hattie G. Simmons has bought the property No. 112 Richmond street, formerly owned by Frank Howland, consisting of a frame house of nine rooms, with all improvements, a large stable and spacious lot, all taxed on $3,900. 100 MILLIONS SPENT IN SOAP

A Great Business for People of Small Capital to Get Into.

SOAP MAKES VAST FORTUNES

Western Company Actually Owns a Soap Mine, Which Reduces Cost Almost to Nothing—Enormous Profits for Stockholders—Small Investors Can Buy Stock and Be Protected.

Some interesting statistics have come to light on the consumption of household necessaries. For example, it is estimated that about $100,000,000 worth of soap is used up annually by Americans—over $7,000,000 a month, or $230,000 a day. This is based on the fact that there are 20,000,000 families in the United States, and that, conservatively, each family spends on an average of 35 cents a month for soap.

From a merchandising standpoint this is especially interesting because, unlike many other commodities, these millions do not represent the mere purchase price of an article that lasts for months or years, but soap is bought and rebought every few days. Merchants know what it is to deal in articles that once bought are quickly used up, only to be rebought again.

The meaning of it is shown in such millionaire firms as Proctor & Gamble, Hydrank, Kirk, Babbits, Pearce. The fact that all the big package houses manufacture soap is a good indication of the profit there is in it. Recently a plot of ground was discovered out in Nebraska from which a soap is being made that is better purer, and cheaper than any other soap ever made. All other soaps are artificial soaps, this is a natural soap It comes from a "soap mine."

Strange as it may seem, there actually is a soap mine, though, so far as known this is the only one, it was found near the town of Orleans in Nebraska, several years ago. The finders thought it was simply a peculiar earth formation, but a strict analysis proved it to be a lava deposited there by a geyser extinct for perhaps centuries. This is a geological and scientific fact.

Experiments proved that the lava had saponaceous qualities, and tests showed that it could easily be converted into a very powerful cleansing soap that had, in fact, genuine medical properties as well. It was, for example, very antiseptic.

The Omaha Bee, the leading newspaper of Nebraska, says of the finding of this soap mine:

"Colorado capitalists bought the property outright, and they thus control the only soap mine known. They have taken thousands of dollars worth of soap out of the very earth, and it seems reasonable that fortunes will be made from it in the years to come. Among the prominent Coloradoans who interested themselves financially in the mine are Frank A. Joslin, a well known Denver merchant; Hon Harper M. Orahood, a leading member of the Colorado bar; Lieutenant-Governor Parks, President Daly of the Capital Life Insurance Company; F. G. Bonfils, publisher of the Denver Post; Crawford Hill, publisher of the Denver Republican; United States Marshal Bailey, and many others. It will thus be seen that the soap is considerable standard value, and that there must be a substantial basis of fact These men could not afford to be involved in anything that was not genuine.

"The firm controlling the property is the Gerseritic Manufacturing Company Forty-first and Blake streets, Denver, Colo. The company manufactures from this lava a solid soap known as 'Geyserite' soap, which already has a very wide use, though it has only been on the market for about fifteen years, and the sales were never forced. Those who visited the Chicago World's Fair may remember the unique exhibit the company had and the awards of merit it received.

"Other soap manufacturers have to buy all their ingredients in the open market. The fats and oils that go to make up the average soap are expensive. The Colorado concern, owning as it does a soap mine, is able to avoid the expense for material that confronts other soap manufacturers. The geyserite, which forms the greater part of every cake of 'Geyserite' soap, costs practically nothing, as the supply is limitless and the property was bought at a very low figure. Furthermore, the raw material can be deposited in the Denver factory for less than one-half cent a pound

"From this it will be seen that the profits of the company must be enormous. The market is world wide. America alone, as outlined above, uses $100,000,000 worth of soap in a single year. There is no reason why it should not use more Geyserite soap than any other kind, as, in spite of the fact that it costs very little to manufacture, it is the only genuinely pure soap on the market. The company has recently issued a book in which the complete analysis is given, and this shows clearly that this is a remarkable soap. The fact that it is used all over Japan to-day, simply through one person telling another about it, proves conclusively that it has remarkable merit.

"The company, however, has reached that stage in its development where it must spread out. It must build a factory and get more of that $100,000,000 spent annually for soap It will take increased capital, and to secure this capital some inducements must be made "At the present time the company's capacity is only 20,000 cakes a day. They want to increase this to fifty or 100,000 a day. This can only be done by publicity. To push sales means to give publicity to your article, and publicity or advertising costs money. It also means that more salesmen must be put on the road. Such expenses require capital, but the capital soon comes back with large interest from the increased sale of the soap. In order to get more capital to increase the plant, the present stockholders of the Geyserite Manufacturing Company will sell some of their stock to the public, and in order to make the proposition attractive to the small investor the stock can be had way below par at the present time.

"The par value of the stock is $1 per share; it can be bought for 25 cents a share until Oct. 20th only. After that date the price of shares advances to 35 cents; those that buy now can make a profit of from 40 per cent. And as dividends are declared on the par value of stock, it is not unreasonable to say that thousands of dollars will be paid out in the years to come. Those desiring to invest should communicate with the executive office of the company at Forty-fourth and Blake streets, Denver, Colo. Ask all the questions you want, look into the matter from every standpoint. Investigate the officers and the present stockholders. The company issues a booklet regarding its business that makes interesting reading. A copy can be had by writing to the company.

"We know of no better proposition ever offered in the general public. Here is a soap mine owned by the company. The supply of geyserite is limitless. It makes the best soap ever made. The remarkable standard of this paper has never used 'Geyserite' soap he can receive a sample by writing to the company at the building, lot, and entire plant in addition to the mine, are owned outright by the company. It has its own offices, records, marks, etc. It can manufacture a better soap than was ever before made, at a very small cost, and yet the net profit on each cake of soap will be larger than the profit on any other soap on the market. It isn't every day that a person with a hundred or $200 can become a partner in an established, tried-and-proven household necessity, or get in with such prominent business and professional men as are already stockholders" ers in this company.

"We cannot recommend the proposition too highly to all investors. The stock can be had at a very small cost, and on small monthly payments if convenient, and we believe the money invested will be amply protected and looks certain to realize large dividends. We urge readers to write the company and see what they have to offer."

WE MAKE GOOD

On the 9th of September, a little over a month ago, the first advertisement of the Copper Belt Mines Co. appeared in the daily papers.

Last week we bought of the Morse Bros. Machinery Company of Denver

TWO CARLOADS OF MACHINERY, TOOLS AND SUPPLIES

For Immediate Delivery at the Mines at Tusk, Wyoming.

We have made good, and kept faith with our stockholders. We promised to use the money we received in equipping and developing the mine, and we have done so.

More than that, we have saved between $3,000 and $4,000 in the price of this machinery and from three to six months in time of delivery, because our Mr. Hall went out to Denver on a still hunt for bargains. He looked around and found just what was needed and bought at bargain prices. Thanks to you, we had the money, and money talks in buying machinery, as in all else.

The equipment consists of the following in part:

One air compressor, with a capacity of 240 cubic feet per minute at 100 lbs. pressure, sufficient to run three machine drills.

One hoisting engine, with power enough to take care of a shaft 1,000 feet deep. Skip and cars, 3,000 lbs. capacity, 700 feet 3-inch air pipe. 1,000 feet rails. Complete blacksmith outfit, machine shop and tools. 2 Sullivan Air Drills, tools, etc., etc.

The price of this stock will positively be advanced to 25c. per share, after Saturday night, October 13, 1906.

We are not offering a speculative stock, but rather an investment in a proven mine, that is being worked every day, and that will be equipped with a fine plant for work on the Lucky Henry shaft, which is now 300 feet deep in good copper ore, in a vein covered by the company for over one mile, tunnels, etc., within 100 feet or three at most.

A mine of merit that will make good. We know the property and are prepared to stand behind every statement we make regarding it.

You may have been hesitating and wondering whether we would make good, or whether we would fall by the wayside, as so many others have done before us.

If you have any doubts about us or our mine, why not start an investigation to-day, and get in on the 20c. price. There is time if you act quickly.

We had to return subscriptions at the 10c. price, and again at 15c., that came too late.

We will return the money of the laggards at 20c., too. Remittances must be postmarked not later than Saturday, Oct. 13th, to buy stock at 20c, cash, 25c. on time. It is worth 50c. and should go to that price when the machinery is installed and working.

It should go to par in six months from that time.

Let us repeat what we have said so often before, so that it will stick in your memory.

This is a real Copper Mine—a second Greene Consolidated, with copper ore showing on the surface at all points.

We are working on the shafts now—and are in ore all the way down. A fair sized investment now in this stock should keep you in comfort when this mine is fully opened up and our mill is grinding out ore. There is ore enough in those claims to keep us running for years.

We are going after it, the world is clamoring for Copper and more Copper. The demand is increasing yearly, let us get together and supply it.

If, particularly, the chance affords to acquire a stock interest in a producer "Baby," a copper "prospect," grasp the opportunity. Undeveloped or but partially developed mineral properties offer ground floor opportunities that are rapidly vanishing beyond the reach of all but the wealthy. The present copper prices are causing men to search as diligently for copper as they in the past have sought for gold. Both are gouging the mountain fastnesses of the Rocky West, wearing the icy blasts of the mountaineers North, when they strike a "copper contact" at their own expense, but when time demonstrates they have a mine they have not the capital to equip it. ONE SHOT, SCORE HURT IN FIGHT OVER DOG.

Bullets Fly as Turks and Syrians Riot in Old Dispute.

ONE IS JAILED, CHARGED WITH INTENT TO KILL

One man was shot and a score or more battered and bruised in a clash between Turkish and Syrian residents of Edinboro street yesterday, in which about fifty men took part. This fight is recruited from a feud that has been keeping the police busy for several weeks. The disputed owner ship of a dog started the trouble.

Selim Saras, a Turk, of No. 31 Edinboro street, is locked up in the City Prison charged with assault with intent to kill on Abraham Corey and his brother, Michele, Syrians, of No. 15 Edinboro street.

Bullet Wounds in Hand.

Abraham Corey was struck in the left hand by one of the two bullets which Saras is alleged to have discharged at the pair. His brother is suffering from a severe beating which he says was given him by compatriots of Saras.

The others who figured in the disturbance were all more or less injured by blows from sticks, stones and fists when the patrol of the La Grange street station drove into the midst of the melee with two officers.

These times within the past two weeks policemen have been sent to the colony to quell disturbances. In each case the principals disappeared on the approach of the police and the secrecy maintained by the two factions made it impossible to capture the ringleaders.

Starts with Fist Fight.

An argument, followed by a fist fight, took place yesterday when Saras and the two Coreys met on Edinboro street. In a few minutes the entire population of the colony was on the street, a howling mob. The shots rang out, but they were fired by Saras, so it is said, to increase the fury of the enemy. 20TH CENTURY CLUB GETS BEQUEST OF $2000.

Before an enthusiastic assemblage of over 200 representative Bostonians who attended the 20th Century Club dinner at the Hotel Somerset, No. 3 Joy street, yesterday afternoon, President Charles Dole made the announcement that Mrs. Adelaide M. BOSTON TO-DAY GIVES ROYAL GREETING TO T. P. O'CONNOR, NOTED HOME RULE CHAMPION

HAS DUEL OF WITS AS GUEST OF ROOSEVELT

Governor and Mayor Join Committee to Welcome Brilliant Parliamentarian.

BIG MEETING TO-NIGHT

After passing several hours yesterday with President Roosevelt in Washington, the Hon. T. P. O'Connor, the famous "Tay Pay," Irish leader, parliamentarian and journalist, arrives in Boston to-day.

The warm welcome that have been extended to him in all the other American cities he has visited will be duplicated here. He will be met at the South station by a delegation from the United Irish League and escorted to the Hotel Lenox, where he will stay while in Boston. With him are Mrs. O'Connor, Edward Blake and Michael J. Ryan, the newly elected president of the United Irish League.

"Teddy" and "T. P." in a "Jolly."

Mr. O'Connor was accompanied to the White House yesterday by Mr. Ryan, Professor Maurice F. Egan of the Catholic University and William F. Bowling. To meet the President Mr. O'Connor was obliged to defer his visit to Boston for a day and to break an engagement he had made to lunch with Governor Guild at the Algonquin Club yesterday.

President Roosevelt and Mr. O'Connor

cold each other many complimentary things during their chat. "T. P." has the gift of blarney and is known as a great "Joller," and the President has few equals in the art of saying pleasant words. Mr. O'Connor told the President that he "looked like the statue of liberty in New York harbor" during the great storm of the early.

Behind all the blarney, however, there was much genuine regard. Mr. O'Connor has been a great admirer of the President for many years and after each meeting has gone home with an increased admiration for his genius. On the other hand the President has watched Mr. O'Connor's career on the other side of the water with much interest and yesterday assured him that he was following the efforts of Ireland's champions with the belief and hope that they would succeed.

The President, alluding to his forthcoming article on the Celtic Saga, declared that his study of them had made him feel he knew them over the high places from the romance in the story of learning and civilization, and the no man, especially with Irish blood in his veins, could fail to have respect for himself and his race who [illegible] such studies.

The President then asked O'Connor to give the message to the Irish people that he (the latter) and admiration for them grew stronger every year, and that he earnestly hoped for their prosperity.

Says Home Rule Sure.

After leaving the President's office Mr O'Connor had a little levee in the anteroom, during which he told the newspaper men the story of his life, his hopes and his fears, with gatling gun rapidity of speech and interspersed with any quantity of scintillating wit.

Mr. O'Connor says that a home rule bill will be passed by the next House of Commons by a good majority.

If there is sufficient pressure brought to bear upon the House of Lords, Mr. O'Connor says, the bill will be passed, but he is not at all confident. In the efforts for home rule the Irish party is working hand in hand with the Labor party, and when Labor presses at the house rulers put their shoulders to the wheel to help them out.

"Nominally, it is true, the Irish home rule party does not hold strength in the present House of Commons to make its co-operation absolutely necessary for continuance of liberal power," explained Mr O'Connor, "but, as a matter of practical politics, they must have us. The Irish home rule party is still the pivot of British politics."

In Common Sympathy.

Mr. O'Connor expressed confidence and satisfaction when asked about the outlook for home rule legislation under the Campbell-Bannerman government.

"A bill will be introduced in February next," he said, "and we anticipate a passage by the commons, looking to the re-establishment of Ireland's parliament. The political situation in the Kingdom is now such that the reform element in Great Britain must cooperate with us because they are as devoted to their reform programme as we are to our home rule idea. We can help them to work their ideas and they can help us to realization of our aspirations.

"Together these two interests now allied in common sympathy as well as in common interest will succeed at last."

"But what will the Lords do?" inquired the questioner. "Will the home rule bill have a better fate at their hands than did the Gladstonian measures directed for the same end?"

Opposition to Lords.

"I anticipate," replied Mr. O'Connor, "that there will be a very determined opposition in the Lords—they will not willingly give up their opposition to the progressive policies to which the country is committed. It is safe to look for a long and vigorous agitation, in which public opinion will make itself felt most earnestly.

"There have been frequent suggestions of late in more radical quarters, that the time is at hand for the abolition of the Lords. Do you anticipate that the coming test may extend so far as an effort in that direction?

"There have it is true, been [illegible] of that sort," said the Irish leader, "but I can't tell what may develop [illegible] present movement. It can [illegible] borne in mind that the English reformers are just as determined to secure action in which they are interested at this time as any of the rest of us. There is a majority in the Commons of about 11[illegible] for the Home Rule measure, for [illegible] Dan either of the Gladstone bills ever secured.

There's Always a Way.

"But if it comes to a contest over the existence of the Lords, will it be possible to accomplish that end without resort to extra constitutional methods?"

Mr. O'Connor looked down from his six feet two and smiled. "There are always methods of achieving good things," he said, "if there is sufficient will. He did not say if there was in his confident manner the implication that per[illegible] [illegible] orders know. It is [illegible] to say that Gladstone once threatened when the House of Lords had set its face against one of Progressive measures. Mr. Gladstone threatened the creation [illegible] enough number of Liberal peers to [illegible] even the overwhelming majority of [illegible] in the upper chamber, and the threat [illegible]

Coming to Their Own.

Asked about present conditions and [illegible] Irishmen in Ireland, Mr. O'Connor said that under the operation of the famous land act the people were fast coming back into their own.

"In ten or fifteen years more of the present decline," he said, "the people of Ireland will once more own the soil on which they live. About a third of the land has already been taken over in fee by them, under the land laws which the government [illegible] upon the purchase price, on a fair [illegible] and the tenant in given [illegible] half years to pay it back. CAR CRUSHES OUT BABY'S LIFE AS SHE RUNS TO GET CANDY

PENNY FALLS FROM HER HAND AS SHE DIES

Four-Year-Old Little One Run Over In Street in Front of South Boston Home.

POLICE HOLD MOTORMAN

Clutching tightly in her little hand a penny which had been given her, four-year-old Nellie Walsh was struck by a trolley car at West Broadway and B street, South Boston, yesterday afternoon, while she was on her way to buy candy, and was so badly injured that she died within a few minutes.

Nellie was the oldest of the three children of Michael Walsh, who is employed by the Armstrong Transfer Company, and who lives at No. 113 West Broadway.

Someone gave the child a penny and told her to buy candy. Laughing, she started across the street in front of her home to a candy store.

Child Struck by Car.

His face blanched as he tried in vain to stop the car. It struck the child with awful force, throwing her to the pavement and crushing the right side of her head.

Like a flash, Cross, with Patrolman Olaf Johnson of the Broadway Station and Patrolman Cronin of the City Point Station, who were riding in the front vestibule, sprang to the street.

The front trucks had gone over the little girl and her body was about under the middle of the car. Johnson got down on his hands and knees and lifted the child in his arms. She was frightfully mangled and covered with blood, but was still breathing.

He stepped back on the car, still holding the child, and told the motorman to hurry to the police station, half a block away. When the car stopped in front of the station Johnson carried the little girl into the guardroom and placed her on a table.

As he did so the little head opened and the penny fell to the floor.

Died in a Few Minutes.

Dr. Sheehan was called but his first glance showed that her case was hopeless. The child had died within a few minutes after the accident.

The police notified Nellie's mother. For a moment she could not understand. Then she fainted. Word was sent to the father and he hurried home, almost prostrated.

After an investigation, Captain Westcott decided to hold Motorman Cross, although the latter was on the car said that he was not running at an excessive speed, and those who were on the platform said that the accident could not have been avoided.

Cross was released this night in $2,000 bail, which, it was said by the police, was furnished by his employers, the Boston Elevated Railroad Company.

PLUMBERS MAY GO OUT ON STRIKE THIS WEEK.

A big strike of plumbers is threatened in Boston this week. The union has demanded $4.50 a day as the scale wage and a committee presented the matter to employers.

More than 400 members of Plumbers' Union No. 12 attended the special meeting held last evening to hear the report of the representatives of the organization. What the committee stated was not made public at the conclusion of the meeting. Members of the union were talking strike when they left Red Men's Hall.

The committee will talk with employers again tomorrow. Decisive action by the men is expected Tuesday night. It is believed by many that the committee will present an ultimatum to the bosses to morrow. But for the conservative men in the union, it is likely a strike would be ordered at once. The new scale asked for is an increase of fifty cents a day.

After talking again with employers, the committee will make known the result to the general executive board which will be in session to-morrow evening.

BALLOONISTS FIGHT DEATH IN GALE IN MIDAIR.

Airship Driven for Miles by Tempest in Flight From Philadelphia to Paterson, N. J. New Long Distance Record.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Philadelphia, Oct. 6.—Caught in a side by a tempest that threatened every moment to develop into a hurricane, Dr. Samuel J. Ottinger and Arthur C. Atherholt of this city to-day had a thrilling struggle for life in A. H. Chandler's balloon "Initial," which finally was brought in the ground about ten miles beyond Paterson, N. J.

The trip broke the longdistance balloon record from this city, but the straight away distance traveled was nothing compared to the actual distance traversed by the balloon as it was whirled about and driven miles and miles in a circuit over the low-lying clouds, and the wind kept rising every minute. Some of the spectators declared that it appeared that the steadiness of the balloon was also a sign, to let loose the winds.

But from the reports which the aeronauts telephoned to their friends after landing the storm above the earth must have been more violent than the lower rush of wind.

BOSTON FINANCIER WEDS BROOKLINE GIRL IN CHICAGO

James Weld Garret and Miss Elizabeth Hammill Calkins Are Made One.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Chicago, Oct. 6.—The wedding of James Weld Garret and Miss Elizabeth Hammill Calkins was celebrated this morning at the home of George F. Brown, Jr., at Kenilworth today. Mr. Garret is a resident of Boston, where his family have lived for seven generations back. He is a graduate of Miss Calkins is a daughter of Mrs. Lucy Calkins of Brookline, Mass., who was in attendance at the wedding.

The wedding was an unpretentious one, attended only by immediate friends and relatives. The bride's sister, Mrs. George F. Brown, Jr., was in charge of the affair.

Bishop Charles Edward Cheney performed the ceremony, which was followed by a reception and refreshments. The bride and groom will leave for a short tour of the East and then make their residence in Brookline.

Mrs. Calkins attended the ceremony but the bride was given away by her brother, Eugene Calkins.

GIRL ATTACKED, MAN CAPTURED BY ANGRY POSSE.

Child Reported to Have Identified Lincoln Farm Hand as Man Who Beat Her.

HURRIED TO JAIL TO SAVE HIM FROM HARM

Angry Citizens Threaten Vengeance on Him—Stoutly Declares His Innocence.

ALL THE TOWN AROUSED BY STORY OF VICTIM

After an exciting search by a posse of citizens Fred Bough, a farm hand of South Lincoln, was captured yesterday and held on the charge of having attacked Ellen Conners, seven years of age as she was returning from school.

The word that the little girl had been assaulted spread through the community very quickly and great indignation was aroused. When the man was overtaken near the little girl's home it was considered advisable to hurry him to jail before citizens wreak vengeance upon him at once.

The child is said to have identified Bough, but he stoutly maintains his innocence. He is already arrest is due chiefly to the keen powers of mind of Harold Walley, twelve years old, who was out with Ellen and her younger sister when a man sprang from bushes that line the road in dense woods.

Sped for Help on Bicycle.

The boy was on a bicycle and sped away to bring help. He rode at full speed to the railroad station and gave the alarm. Men there seized all kinds of weapons and ran down the road to the scene of the attack.

Meanwhile the boy spread the alarm in the centre of the town. Other posses were quickly organized to beat the woods for the miscreant.

Never before was Lincoln so stirred by an atrocity. Threats of vengeance were uttered by staid citizens as they searched through the covert for the child and the man who had seized her. Bough offered no resistance and, eight hundred of Harrington, two miles of a mile from the spot where the girl's cries were heard. News of his arrest spread quickly, and before he reached the town lock-up he was surrounded by a constantly increasing crowd, which threatened with bodily harm. To make sure that the accused townsfolks would be spared violence, Constable Thomas Baird, who had directed the search, took Bough to Concord jail. He will be arraigned in court there on Monday.

Declares His Innocence.

"I didn't do it, you've got the wrong man," said Bough. "I'm not that kind of a fellow, ask Charles Smith, head selectman. He knows me. I worked for him about three years ago."

Bough is well known in Lincoln and the Roberts settlement, near the Walham watch factories. Public indignation against him run so high because it was only a few hours after the girl was reported missing that Bough, a native of North Lincoln, and is still believed through fright and injuries.

She and her sister Mary, seven years old were on their way home after school, when they were set upon by the fiend, who left the man sprang out of ambush and seized her. She struggled fiercely and the man showered blows upon her. It is said that he struck her with a club. But the child fought desperately and screamed so loudly that the family lived. She was terrified and bruised when she reached home.

CRAZY DOG KILLER PUTS BEACHMONT PETS IN PANIC.

A dog slayer, whom the police say is probably crazy, is at work in the Beachmont section of Revere. During the past week half a dozen valuable cats and dogs have died from poison, of various kinds. Early afternoon a prize pet of a collie, owned by George Cleaves of No. 135 Bradstreet avenue, died after being sick but a short time. The dog was given some home remedies by its owner, but they did no good. Mr. Cleaves thinks that the animal ate meat into which ground glass had been mixed.

The residents of Beachmont are indignant and have urged the police to leave no stone unturned to bring the guilty persons responsible.

Friday afternoon a valuable St. Bernard owned by Alfred Kelley of Pleasant avenue died suddenly. Dr. Louis Joe Bierer, veterinarian, who was called said that the animal had eaten meat which ground glass had been mixed in.

An Angora cat owned by Mrs. Rice of Ellis avenue, died yesterday afternoon from poison of some kind, and several Mr. Haskins neighbors have reported pets poisoned.

DID THIS BOY KILL FATHER? SWEETHEART STANDS BY HIM

"Edgar could not have done the awful thing. He is too tender hearted. I have seen him in tears because he hurt my hand." Gretchen Brian, Meikle's sweetheart.

Edgar Meikle, Tortured by "Third Degree" Ordeal, Unshaken in His Declaration of Innocence of the Crime

His Friends' Faith in Him Is Unmoved and His Teachers Arrange That He Continue Studies in the Salem Jail

After being locked up in the Salem jail for a week and, according to his story, having been put through a remarkable "third degree" examination by the State police in an attempt to wring from him a confession, Edgar Weston Meikle, the fifteen-year-old boy who is accused of having shot and killed his father, was more emphatic yesterday than ever in the declaration of his innocence.

Young Meikle was visited in half a dozen friendly calls during the week probably sixty people called at the jail to see him. Not all who wished to talk to the boy were admitted. It was to the visitors, and particularly to Mrs. Katherine Trimble, the wife of his guard Jay, and Miss L. B. Allen, his former school teacher, that Meikle told the stories of his alleged treatment by members of the State police.

Threatened with Death.

One of the stories told him he said to Mrs. Trimble was to the effect that Detective Sergt. Hurley had told Meikle to believe, he reported to Miss Allen, that he had found a witness who saw him shoot his father. All of those who have trusted with the boy, with the exception of the State police, assert their belief in the truth of his story.

It was learned yesterday that Miss Allen, a school girl sweetheart in Miss Gretchen Brian of No. 5 High street and that she believes implicitly in his innocence and is standing by him loyally.

"It is a shame," said the girl at her home last night. "Edgar could not have done the awful thing. He is too tender hearted. I have seen him in tears because he hurt my hand slightly. He was never the least bit rough and he was good and kind to everybody."

While it is probable that the boy may be kept in jail for several weeks before his trial the admissibility of the statements he is said to have made to Miss Allen and other persons was brought to the attention of the jail authorities to-day by Miss Allen herself. Miss Allen is head and Miss Hunt of the Lewis School, both former teachers of the young prisoner. They took to the jail a fresh supply of school books, and they were gratefully received by the boy and every possible facility afforded him for study by the jail attendants.

"I think that a great injustice is being done Edgar," said Miss Allen after she had visited the boy in jail, "and I have never been more fully convinced of his innocence than I was on my visit to-day.

"Needs Special Treatment."

"I should like to impress on the public mind that this is a case for special treatment. As for myself, this week I declared him rather than depressed him. I never saw Edgar Meikle appear so many as to-day, and I told him so.

"With head erect and chin up I did not see how he could be firmly in the grave and said: 'Because I am innocent.'

"Edgar has developed pride in life. He feels that he will be freed in time, and he proposes to make the most of his time while in confinement, so that upon coming out he will have had nothing from an educational standpoint.

"I think books we gave him, paints, brushes and pencils and while we were present he occupied himself with them. He asked for his use in his cell or work. At the jail they inquire as they would reasonable in every way for his intellectual welfare.

"Edgar's plan to begin study on the week day morning and carry his studies through the eight months of his confinement so that he will be in readiness could be made to have an instructor see him every day."

He Is Not a Criminal.

"We are satisfied that there is nothing substantial against the boy and that he is not a criminal. We have seen him and we feel that his time should not be lost nor his mentality be made to suffer from the effects of others.

We talked mostly about his prospects in study. Once when the conversation turned, he said:

"What do you suppose the big men said to me? He asked what I would say when he produced a witness that can murder his father. I told him that I knew he had no such witness and was proposing such a thing. Not having been in the room he had no such witness against me.

"Edgar was very much cut up at the

DENIES CHARGE OF 'DOUBLE CROSS' IN WARD 9 VOTE.

Isaac Gordon, Election Commissioner, Makes Indignant Refutal of Barry-Bowen Allegations—Asks Investigation

Denying that there was any fraud in the ballot returns from Ward 9, as was alleged by ex-Alderman David F. Barry and Patrick Bower [illegible] Gordon, ward 9 of the voting booth in Precinct 2, has written to the Board of Election Commissioners and also to the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN, that there was no fraud [illegible].

The charge was that there was "double crossing" of no less than 337 ballots in Ward 9 at the time of the State primaries. Mr. Gordon writes that, although his name was not mentioned in the charges as published, his integrity was assailed because he was responsible for the proceedings at the polling booth.

The charges were made by the Barry-Bowen faction when it was found that although they secured the nomination of their candidate for the House they nevertheless lost on their pledged delegation because 337 ballots which were claimed by them were alleged to have been marked for both delegations, and thus voided.

Mr. Gordon has demanded an investigation by the Election Commissioners, John J. Gartland, chairman of the Ward 9 Democratic Committee, has also written to the Election Commissioners. He says that he took District Attorney Morton and Police Inspector Moore to look into the affair.

At police headquarters the men said they were James Napoleli and Dominko Fulginita, of No. 318 East street, Lenham in Napoleli's pocket was a loaded revolver.

Six Days in Jail Fail to Shake Boy's Declaration of Innocence

Edgar Weston Meikle arrested last Monday evening charged with having shot and killed his father in Lynn about a year ago.

He charges that the police have tried to harass and frighten him into a confession by telling him that he would be electrocuted and that they have a witness who saw him shoot his father.

Visited by many of his friends during the week, all of whom express their confidence in his innocence.

Two of his former school teachers took him books yesterday, and he will continue his education in the Salem jail.

Miss L. B. Allen, one of the teachers, said: "I am more convinced than ever that he is innocent."

ABBE MOURNED AS MURDERED FLED FOR LOVE.

Requiem Celebrated for Repose of Soul of Delarue, Alive in Brussels.

YOUNG SCHOOL TEACHER WITH HIM WHEN FOUND

Hyena Put on Trail for His "Body" as Told in Sunday American.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Copyright, 1906, by Amer. in Europe Syndicate.

Paris, Oct. 6.—After the authorities had decided that he had been murdered and the clergy had celebrated a requiem mass for the repose of his soul the Abbe Delarue of Chatenay who disappeared several weeks ago, has been found alive in Brussels. With him was a young woman named Renaut, a school teacher of Chatenay, who left the place about two weeks ago.

The disappearance of the abbe was one of the sensations of the year. The most careful and far-reaching search was made, the aid of a hyena, on suspicion being evil-tempered. The hyena scented a hyena, in the belief that if the abbe had been murdered and his body left in the woods the hyena would find it even if it had been buried.

For days and weeks the search continued, but without avail. Then his parishioners, by whom he was much beloved, had been assembled in the church and a requiem mass for the repose of his soul had been celebrated.

Told Story of His Flight.

Now it develops that almost at the very hour that his parishioners were praying for him, while the church bells tolled and the office was stopped in its work, the Abbe Delarue was making his escape with the young girl and was telling her the story of his flight.

"I feel I can say," the abbe said, "I turned up my collar, pulled down my hat, so I was obliged to play a part which I have long since thought I should be forced to take in order to escape from my parishioners, whom God knows I loved tenderly. I had cultivated Mlle Renaut when she was left in my charge by my parish, and it was through my influence that she got the position of village school teacher. One day I discovered that my sentiments for her were not in accordance with my duties as a priest. From that moment I decided to go away, so that I might be out of the difficulty by abandoning the field. I hesitated and then began making the layout of the way I

"There seemed no possible way of flight. Mlle Renaut and I arranged the matter between us. I disappeared, and she soon as the excitement over my disappearance began to subside she followed me. She secured a position as a teacher here, and from that city wrote to her sisters and a couple of intimate friends that she had decided not to return to Chatenay, but had accepted a post as governess in a family which was about to leave for Germany. She was, however, careful to give no names, and not to indicate for what part of the country she was leaving. She joined me at the spot agreed upon, and together we came to Brussels. We shall be married as soon as possible.

"The day following my departure from Chatenay I spent in Paris. I went on the next day and went to Etampes, where I dined with a friend, who, it will be remembered, told how she had sent a telegram bearing her I rode back toward Chatenay, and left my bicycle in the woods where it was found by the Huddon surveyor, Revah. Then I walked across country and took the train again for Paris at Bretteville station. When I got to that city I discarded my priestly robes and donned civilian attire. I travelled all over the east of France, seeking a suitable place to settle down and begin a new life, fearing I should be recognized, and I decided to come to Belgium. I read the papers every day, and often talked with people who never suspected that the man talking to the very man whose disappearance caused them so much excitement.

"Now the worst is over. I hope to earn an honest living as a commercial traveller. An old college friend of mine who is in business has promised to employ me. It is time I went to work. My funds are running low. My courage is at an end. I have been obliged to live in concealment, and to the valorous little woman for love of whom I forsook my vows. But though I have broken faith with the church I am, I suppose, no less a devout Catholic. I have tried to be true to myself and to what I believed to be my best.

Secret Leaked Out.

The abbe registered at the little hotel at which he was staying as Monsieur Brecourt, but there were the formalities to be filled out and so on, complying with these he went to the Town Hall, and there declared his identity. He had to have it registered as Brecourt and that his secret be kept, but the authorities refused to register a false name, and in some way the truth leaked out.

The decision to be taken by the French authorities in the matter has not been announced. It is not at all unlikely that the ex-abbe will be obliged to return to France and appear before the authorities for a portion at least of the expense to which he put them in order that his body and his probable assassin. Meanwhile the numerous fortune-tellers and others who pretended by their superior powers to solve the mystery are furious, but the original trainer who lent the hyena is jubilant as the hire in evening proves that the failure of his beast to find a corpse was not because the hyena was a poor scent-hunger, but because there was no corpse to find.

LADY BATEMAN HAS BECOME ENGLISHED

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, Oct. 6.—Lady Bateman (Mrs Knapp of New York), who has just returned from a cure at Contrexeville, has astonished her American friends of late by her energy and her active interest in sport. From being a highly strung, nervous and rather delicate woman she now enters thoroughly into all her husband's interests and takes the keenest interest in his shooting parties.

After a brief visit to New York, Lady Bateman will settle down at the family place, Shobdon Court, and entertain a series of large pheasant shooting parties. She has become an expert in providing just the right sort of "shooting lunch-eons" for the men, and herself keeps the game book.

She is, in fact, another wonderful instance of the adaptability of the American woman to her surroundings.

Humiliated by Profligate Husband and Son, She Finds Happiness in Declining Years.

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

London, Oct. 6.—Queen Natalie of Servia, no longer a monarch and for five years widowed, says that her declining years are the happiest of her life. She is a great favorite in London society and seems to feel even more at home in England than in Paris or any other capital.

Although she has taken on flesh she is still a handsome woman. Once she was one of the most beautiful in the world. Her eyes are said to be second only to those possessed by her Majesty of Spain. Her husband, the late King Milan, was exiled the most despised ruler of his race, financially, morally and financially. He caused Queen Natalie untold woe.

Mourns for the Living.

Considering his life and treatment of her, friends have often wondered that she continues to wear the sombre gown of mourning.

"Perhaps," she said, "I mourn for the living as well as the dead."

This was shortly before the assassination of her son, King Alexander of Servia, and Queen Draga, by army conspirators. King Alexander was as prodigate as his father, King Milan. His conduct was so atrocious that it absolutely drove his mother Queen Natalie was exiled from Servia after she was divorced from her royal husband. Owing to her son's conduct, she had to decide to go back to Belgrade after he had become ruler. The Servian people forced King Milan to abdicate in favor of his son.

Queen Natalie went to Paris to live. While a guest at a hotel which took fire she carried in her arms through the flames a helpless old woman. When her son was murdered she made a will leaving her immense fortune to the poor of Servia and France.

Queen Natalie finally sought consolation in religion. She visited the Pope, and while at his feet confided her woes, the Pope, it is said, promised her peace. After she left Rome she said that she was happier than for years. She has become very devout. One of her warmest friends is Father Vaughan, the friar who recently raised a fortune in London by means of a fashionable society for bridge parties.

He was a member of the household of Queen Victoria, the American agent for the French Society of Dramatic Authors.

URGE CONFISCATION OF ALL CHURCH PROPERTY.

Paris, Oct. 6.—An important meeting of the Chamber under the presidency of President Fallieres, took place at Ramouillet to-day, to discuss religious and other questions on which decisions are necessary preliminary to the reassembling of the national assembly.

M. Breton, a radical deputy, supported by a group of radical colleagues, has decided, in view of the attitude of the Vatican, to propose upon the reassembling of the immediate confiscation of all church buildings and property.

The executive committee of the radical socialistic party, in indorsing this suggestion by Breton, today announced that any direct or indirect revolutionary with the Pope or any cardinal will be considered to be treason."

LUNATIC GETS INTO NAPOLEON'S BED

Paris, Oct. 6.—A lunatic who called himself "Napoleon the Fourth" has caused some sensation by going to bed in the historic couch of the great Emperor at Versailles.

When some tourists came to the room containing the bed of Napoleon I they saw a figure dressed in the famous gray overcoat and cocked hat of the "Little Corporal" lying on the bed. When asked who he was he replied:

"I am Napoleon the Fourth. I fought at Sedan, and now I am going to resume my imperial rank."

COUNT SENT TO JAIL ON CHARGE OF FRAUD

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Leipzig, Oct. 6.—Count Colona Walewski has just been condemned to five months' imprisonment here on a charge of fraud.

The Count was at one time well known in America, having returned from there in 1904, after trying his luck as a horse dealer. He was not successful at it, however, and as he had a good musical education, he give piano and singing lessons and also sang in concerts.

Count Walewski was at one time engaged to an American widow, but the engagement was broken off.

YANKEE WOMAN WON PIGEON SHOOTING CUP

Mrs. McKim of Baltimore Beats Expert Marksmen at Biarritz.

Biarritz, Oct. 6.—The American colony here is congratulating itself because one of its members, Mrs. McKim, the daughter of Captain Emerson of Baltimore, has beaten many of the best shots in the Biarritz contest for pigeon shooting.

Her competitors included the Marquis Villalobar de Asturias, a number of several princes at Monte Carlo, Conde O'Brian, Principe Ludovic Pignatelli and Arango, Seneca Hendricks, Ibarlucea and Goyena, and Le Testalot, a well-known French sportsman.

The prize won was a silver cup offered by her father, Captain Emerson.

BONI EXPECTS TO BLOCK OFF DIVORCE.

Countess Anna Likely to Get Only a Separation, With Big Allowance to Husband.

CASTELLANE MAKING A STRENUOUS FIGHT

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Paris, Oct. 6.—Count Boni de Castellane, it is now understood, will fight the divorce proceedings brought by his wife, formerly Anna Gould, when the case comes up on October 17.

The countess, it is said, will probably be unable to secure a divorce on statutory grounds, and must be satisfied with a separation. If the latter is granted and the judge decides Boni's allowance according to the countess's fortune, the amount allowed him is likely to greatly exceed the offer now made by her.

This explains Count Boni's strenuous opposition to a divorce.

PARIS GETS AT LAST A MESSENGER SERVICE

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Paris, Oct. 6.—At last Paris is to have a District Messenger service.

A great source of annoyance to Americans in Paris has been the lack of a messenger service. Any one wishing to send a note by hand to any part of the city has been obliged to have recourse to the services of a cafe employe called the "chasseur," or to depend upon the more or less reliable services of the corner bootblack. Messenger boys exist, but they are attached to the Postal Department and do/ner only such messages as are mailed in the ordinary way with extra stamps in the special delivery box.

The new service has been organized by an American woman, Miss Andrews, who has been associated for several years with Miss Hubbard, the American agent for the

NAPOLEON TABLET PUT ON WRONG HOUSE

Special Cable to the Boston Sunday American.

Paris, Oct. 6.—Americans who have been staring with great interest at the upper windows of the house No. 5 on the Quai Conti, where an inscription inserted upon the wall near the street door says that the great Bonaparte dwelt in the garret of that house when he was a young artillery officer, have been looking at a fake. Not an intentional one, however, for the inscription was put up in good faith by the city authorities.

M. Victorien Sardou, the celebrated dramatist, who is an authority on Napoleonic subjects, has been looking up the subject and has discovered that a mistake has been made. It was in the house now numbered 11 Quai Conti that the little Corporal lived. The inscription is to be removed to the correct position.

When the scalp throws off either dandruff or gummy substance, it is an evidence of disease, and no time should be lost in correcting. You certainly would not hesitate to treatment were you to look at this matter through a magnifying glass. When highly magnified it resembles a working mass of insects, the creatures absorb the nutriment or life-sustaining scalp causing the scalp to become dry and scaly, resulting in the loss of hair and baldness. Danderine works wonders in such cases. It thoroughly eradicates all pernicious scalp bacteria and makes the hair grow—usually long, strong and beautiful. BROWN USED OLD STYLE GAME WITH WESLEYAN.

Providence, Oct. 6.—In a drizzling rain, Brown defeated Wesleyan this afternoon on a [illegible] field by a score of 5 to 0. Two Brown gains were made for most part on straight football, few new plays being tried. Two of the touchdowns were earned by telling line plunges, in which Kirley was a star.

Both elevens tried forward passes in the last part of the game, but Wesleyan's attack netted nothing and Brown lost the ball to Wesleyan within the line of scrimmage before playing out five yards.

Two [illegible] were [illegible] inflicted for [illegible] play and holding the game was [illegible] throughout and many [illegible] spectators [illegible] a little more approval of the new style of play. The summary:

MECHANIC ARTS BEAT HAVERHILL

Special to Boston Sunday American.

Haverhill, Oct. 6.—The Haverhill High School eleven received its first defeat of the season this afternoon in the game with Mechanic Arts of Boston, the latter team winning by a score of 6—0. The locals started the game with a substitute back field and the visitors scored their only touchdown after three minutes' play. The game after that was very contested, but neither side was able to score. In the second half Captain Martin fractured his left wrist in making a tackle and was forced to retire, the playing of Kelly and Wrengerski [illegible]

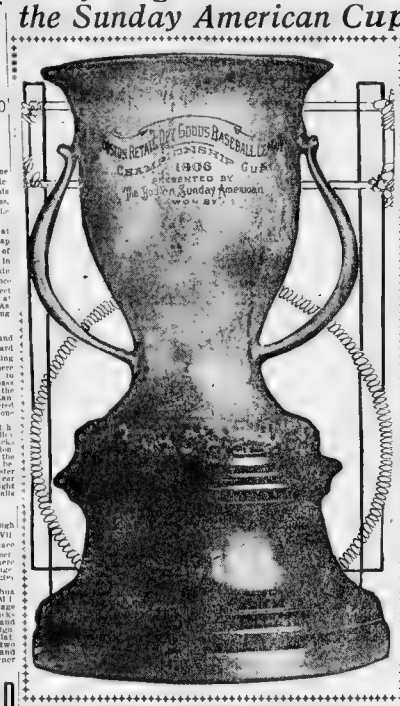
Henry Siegel Team Won the Sunday American Cup



BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN BASEBALL CUP WON BY THE HENRY SIEGEL TEAM.

One of the most interesting competitions on the diamond this season just past was the championship fight in the Boston Retail Dry Goods League, in which Henry Siegel Co., Gilchrist Co., Shepard, Norwell Co. and R. H White Co. were represented and battled for the handsome silver cup offered by the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN.

Never had the interest been so keen among the ball players in the different big retail dry goods stores, and every game was largely attended by enthusiastic crowds of fans and employes from the stores.

The Henry Siegel Company team went through with flying colors and won the cup by a total of seven victories and only one defeat.

All [illegible]'s team was a close second and disputed the [illegible] cup winners till the [illegible] of the season.

After the season was over the Siegel team wanted to play the Jordan March team a series of games for the local dry goods championship, as that team had played independently but could only get one game after Jordan's had won by the close score of 3 to 2.

At the end of the season the Siegel players held a banquet at the Hotel Lenox and presented the cup to General Manager Mr. Kramer in recognition of his support of the team.

The team was made up of Bennet, pitcher, with substitutes Grimes and Meyer; catcher, Sullivan; McMannis and [illegible] first base; Anders, second base; Fay, [illegible]ton and substitute; Daly, left field; D. Sullivan, third base; Finigan, centre field, Long 2, right field.

Manager Keenig did yeoman service for the team during the season and it was a great [illegible] his efforts that perfect [illegible] was [illegible] all his games.

The Siegel team will be on the next [illegible] stronger than ever and willing to meet all comers.

Hawthorne Sees the Yale Eleven Work Under New Rules; Few Heavy Men

BY JULIAN HAWTHORNE.

"He's down! Don't pile on top of him! Let him up!"

These extraordinary and, indeed, hitherto unprecedented words were uttered on the Yale football ground by the captain of the team; and they, perhaps, represent the greatest innovation in our American version of the famous game that I witnessed during my sojourn in New Haven last week.

I had gone down there to gather impressions as to the working of the new football rules at the university, and to see what sort of a team Yale has this year. The oblong field, surrounded by lofty tiers of benches, now empty, lay sweltering in the clear afternoon sunshine. It was as hot as last July, the weather not having as yet learned to accommodate itself to the exigencies of pigskin exercise.

The teams—or teams, for there were three or four of them on the ground—wore their heavy blue sweaters, their shoulder and leg armor, and, in one or two instances, their head and nose armor as well; and in these early stages of training they were ill adapted to withstand the assaults of Apollo. As a matter of fact, the work done was not severe: the men were simply being kept limber between their late struggle with Wesleyan and their approaching one with Lafayette.

Varsity Men Line Up.

So far as the varsity men were concerned, they did but line up, try a few tricks and passes and break up to collect again in another formation. The scrimmages were few and not serious. The new forward pass was used several times, and the double pass, and the separating wings play; and they were executed with only moderate efficiency and snap. The men were learning; the season will be much further advanced before they will approach perfection. As for the epoch-making injunction uttered by Captain Sammy Morse, grandson or grandnephew of the telegraph inventor, it may have been partly prompted by the state of the thermometer, and partly by a wise prudence about subduing his own men so early in the season. Possibly, had the men with his nose in the ground been a Syracuse, the silence of old Yale would have withheld. But I prefer to give Captain Morse the benefit of the doubt.

The new plays I have mentioned have the effect, of course, of opening the game, or to try, and are on that account very welcome from the spectator's point of view. There can be no very rigid crushing formations behind the ball when the ball is waited overhead to an enemy beyond; or even when there is a likelihood of its being waited. And the ball, naturally, has a chance of being seen by the onlookers once in a while. Not but that one needs a quick eye and a watchful attitude to follow it, even then. Certain mystic numbers are called out in series; a good many of them, indeed, so that I began to suspect that most of them might possess no significance other than to bemuse and mislead the foe. Then, suddenly, the ball, which has hitherto been on the ground, in contact with the linear ilex of an athlete who is crouching with every muscle tense as a harp-string -the ball, I say, instantaneously vanishes. You may have to know that it went back word into the clutch of another crouching, tigerish athlete in the rear; but he has not got it, it is gone, here, there, in a flight rising, rising and meanwhile the whole field of players, all of whom have been likewise crouching and vibrating, has abruptly burst into lutesquest movement; and one of those flyers has the ball under his arm. Which of them?—is the question.

Ten to one you cannot tell which, but if somebody on the opposing team fails to detect it there is quick trouble coming to his side. In a moment it will be far up the field toward the goal posts. But generally, after an instant or two of heart failure, the holder has been throttled and rallied, and there he is with his nose in the turf as aforesaid. And so the play goes on. There is also a novel system of short kicks, which necessitates a new disposition of the team in the rear. Upon the whole, however, there is no radical departure from the old methods of American football. There is a tendency to minimize the frequency of mass plays, of piling up pyramids of humanity of ricochetting and head-kicking, but there is no such relief from the peril of "two feet" as there is in soccer football, such immunity is still remote, if we are ever to expect it at all.

Few Heavy Men Seen at New Haven.

The average of the men on the teams, however, seemed to me comparatively light. There were a few heavyweights—massive monsters, built on the old lines, but not many. Good legs, good wind, quickness, were more in evidence than brawniness. The men are more active than formerly spread out over the field; one might say that a different spirit is at work. One may hope that the elephant and the rhinoceros will gradually become rare. But, for the arrival of the ideal, we shall still have to exercise a little patience.

There was a freshman team on the ground, and they were, for a few minutes, lined up against the solid. In this game, or chapter of a game, the play was practically the same as last year, bucking the line, short rushes, piling up of bodies. Once or twice a forward pass by the subs threw the freshmen into confusion. The play of the varsity players was full of vim, but precise and concerted, and pretty soon they were out in mid-field, perspiring. Another squad of subs took their places against the first, but there was no material change in the character of the play.

The number of players on the ground may have been fifty, all told. Each player on the varsity has three subs, so that it brings thirty-three men into the field. The expenses must be heavy, but they are all defrayed, with a good margin, out of the gate money. The undergraduates are therefore required to contribute to the support of the teams. The public pays the freight and everything else.

The new trainer, Mack, who takes the place of Murphy, was on the ground, in a plain gray sweater, but not otherwise of an athletic aspect. He had been, however, a professional sprinter. He took no visible part in directing the practice; that functions are mainly those of trainer. Doubtless he faithfully discharges them; but I cannot help thinking that a time will come when off trainers, in and out of college, will look back upon the era of professional trainers and coaches as not only needless, but barbarous. My guide, philosopher and friend was kindly accompanied me in my investigations, and told me the innumerable things I did not know—Mr. Slosh-sick of the class of '03, in fact—and said that the team had no other training than what their practice on the field afforded them—apart, of course, from ordinary gymnasium work. That surprised me. I should have expected them to take cross-country runs of eight or ten miles daily, at least. My impression is that English teams do so; but then the English game involves much more running than ours.

Yale Team Has Good Nucleus of Veterans.

This year's Yale team contains a good nucleus of veterans, around which the new men gather and absorb wisdom. They make a formidable looking bunch, physically, but I presume that at least half their efficiency in the field this season will be due to the Yale spirit which is breathed into them—the do or die sentiment.

This spirit seems to be fostered at Yale as it is in no other American university. Mr. Sloshwick, in the course of our peregrinations past and present, led me into a lofty and handsome chamber in the gymnasium building—which, by the way, is the most lavishly outfitted home of physical culture that I have ever beheld. The chamber I speak of was hung with many flags and pennants; in gilded cases roundabout were many trophies, medals and athletic insignia, all of them having inscriptions and dates. There may have been thousands of them, altogether. What were they? They were Yale's share of the glorious victories they had carried home from many a hard fought field. There they lie, and hang, in splendid and honorable profusion. And into this glorious and sacred hall, before every contest on field or river, the varsity trains and crews of Yale are brought and permitted to contemplate the records of the achievements of their elder predecessors. There, they are told, are the proofs of the mettle of Yale in the past; see to it that you fail not to maintain the honor which is now committed to your hands! And with that injunction ringing in their ears the young athletes go forth to win success, or, at the very least, to deserve it. And by the majority of instances they do both.

There are 4,000 students at Yale, and there are 1,200 private lockers in the gymnasium. It is a generously appointed building, probably no other university can show its equal, but it ought to be larger than it is. And when we have learned the true inwardness and value of amateur athletics and sport, it doubtless will be. No man ought to leave an American college whose body has not benefited by his sojourn just as much as his mind. It will spoil the one as it has spoiled the other in England.

Meanwhile, let the rear of our universities look out for Yale this year! She shows no symptoms of decadence.

A youngster who will fill the bill is Frank Oberlin, the latest acquisition to the Boston American team, who comes from Milwaukee. He is a clever spitball artist. He broke his arm seven years ago while pitching for the Defiance, O., club and laid off for a year. After he resumed pitching he did not use a curve ball until this year.

Swormstead, who was picked up from the New York State League, is another promising twirler, who was picked by the local team. He beat Washington in the last series in a 2 to 1 contest, allowing but three hits.

No southpaw from the minors looks better than Kroh, who was recently secured for the Hub team. He has all the earmarks of a winner and is likely to be retained next season.

FANS HOPE THESE THREE NEW CHICKLETS WILL MAKE GOOD IN THE HUB NEXT YEAR.

Harvard Ignores Forward Pass and Onside Kick in Game With Maine Boys ball after inexcusable slipups. Maine was penalized fifty yards for mistakes committed chiefly. Fales's fumble on making a catch close to her goal gave Harvard a chance to score, and she did.

Harvard Tried Forward Pass.

The "new" forward pass was not very much in evidence, though Harvard tried the forward pass a few times with indifferent success, but with more success than Maine's attempts. Maine's attempts were pitiful. Harvard's were down the field for a gain of from ten to twenty yards. Lock Reid, after he was taken out of the game, was a thorn in Maine's side. Only a lot of substitutes and the whole back field was changed about and again Reid got down the field and tackled the ball. Nate Hall, who went in at a quarter for Morse, limited the team. Hall did not distinguish himself almost. Immediately after he went in the clash, and for individual brilliancy he was easily among the best players. Fales, who was taken out of the game, was also a star. Both of these players were in the game for the first half, and he dropped.

There were some injuries sustained during the game, but none of a serious nature, and the beating was left for one of the saddest days that Maine has ever had. Maine's coaches were down the field and all over the field, and for individual brilliancy he was easily among the best players. Fales, who was taken out of the game, was also a star. Both of these players were in the game for the first half, and he dropped.

First Half.

Harvard won the kick-off, while Maine's effort to get the ball down the field was a failure, Harvard at her back. Burr lifted the ball to Farwell, who was downed in his tracks. Mather made a good gain around left end. Apollonio got an onside kick on the centre of the field, but could only get two yards in as many trials. Maine got her back on her 15 yard line after passing the penalty. With the ball in her possession Maine began to play for time and got five yards. A surprise play by Farwell netted him a good gain, but in behind the line Burr grabbed the quarter and put him to it to make the distance. The backfield found an opening between left tackle and end and sprinted through for eight yards. Apollonio bucked the centre for five yards and Maine's ball. Foster went through the right side for a good gain. Apollonio bucked the line for five yards. Maine's ball on her own 45 yard line.

BE YOUR OWN BOSS

$15 to $25 Per Week Easily Earned

NO MAN ever made a fortune by his own efforts alone, he must get the help of others to make a profit, are you one of the many who are trying to make a living for yourself and family on your daily wages (salary)? If you are, I SAY STOP right here and consider what I have to say, for it will show you how you can be your own boss, have a big business of your own, and make more money than you ever thought possible. It is a big business and exceedingly profitable; some are earning from $25 to $50 per week profit, others more, and a few times care lost in proportion for the time they work; I am not making any rash statements when I suggest that I am willing to show you how to earn a salary of $1,000 per year, or more, and will do so if you will write me at once. All I ask in return is your name and address and a few minutes' time to explain my proposition. Address A. PARKER, Dodge Building, 702 Chestnut st., Philadelphia, Pa.

FEATURES OF BIG HEARST RECEPTION AT BUFFALO

Streets blaze with red-fire, while thousands cheer along route.

Giant reception at Iroquois Hotel, where hundreds pledge loyalty to ticket.

Monster demonstration in Convention Hall, where 10,000 wildly applaud speech.

Overflow meeting outside, where hundreds, despite rain, waited patiently to greet candidate.

10,000 CHEER HEARST AS HE FLAYS TRUST PARASITES

Buffalo's Capture Complete in Greatest Demonstration Ever Held in Erie County.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 6.—Buffalo emphatically and enthusiastically committed itself to William R. Hearst and the cause of political independence to-night at the greatest demonstration ever held in Erie county.

Convention Hall, the scene of Mr. Hearst's nomination for Governor by the Democratic State convention less than two weeks ago, was packed to its capacity of 10,000 people who greeted the Independence League-Democratic candidate with a burst of cheering under which the building trembled.

Thousands more who were unable to gain admission gave him a tremendous reception upon his arrival at the hall. Cannon boomed, a military band greeted him with the national anthem, and the air was ablaze with fireworks.

The cheering stretched over many blocks. In fact, Mr. Hearst's ride to Convention Hall with the reception committee was in the nature of a triumphal procession. The sidewalks were lined with sympathetic citizens, Democrats, Republicans and Independents, from whose lips came the cry of "Hearst and victory!" in ever swelling chorus. Rain did not lessen the crowds nor in any manner dampen the enthusiasm.

Buffalo has been waiting to display its unity and loyalty to Hearst and Chanler ever since the convention met, and all classes seized to-night's opportunity to make both manifest.

Mr. Hearst's capture of Buffalo was complete. It was the final link in the chain from New York to Lake Erie. The State is now ablaze with enthusiasm for the ticket.

AUDIENCE HAIL CANDIDATE AS 'CHAMPION OF THE PEOPLE'

Participating with Mr. Hearst in to-night's magnificent demonstration were William B. Jackson of this city, the Democratic candidate for Attorney-General; John S. Whalen, candidate for Secretary of State; Clarence J. Shearn, candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, and other well-known orators.

Charles F. Tabor, former Attorney-General, presided. The meeting was held under the auspices of the Independence League, the Democratic organization co-operating in the capacity of guests of the meeting.

William J. Connors, Democratic State chairman, called the meeting to order at 8 o'clock. Previous to this time in the gallery kept things livened up with a medley of popular airs. The hall was still decked in the colors with which it was made beautiful for the recent convention.

The crowd began arriving early and long before 8 o'clock the hall was practically filled. The platform was graced with well known fights in local Democratic and Independence League politics, each of whom was given a round of applause upon his appearance.

Cheers for Conors.

William J. Conners and Mr. Jackson were the recipients of genuine ovations, and when he arose to call the meeting to order Mr. Connors was greeted with cheers. He named Charles F. Tabor for chairman of the meeting and Mr. Tabor was warmly received when he took the chair.

Mr. Tabor's address was brief. Referring to Mr. Hearst he said:

"We have gathered here to-night to ratify the nomination of the great champion of the rights of the common people, that live American, that true Democrat, who has pledged to us if he is elected that he will clean out the Augean stables of heartlessness and corruption, William R. Hearst."

Scathing Words for Trust Men.

This sentiment sounded the keynote of the meeting, and from that time onward the meeting was characterized by outbursts of applause which continued until the meeting was adjourned. Mr. Hearst's address, following the great demonstration that his name had already lasted seven minutes, was another crush with him.

Ring Indictment of the politicians and their masters of the Ryan-Belmont-Morgan type.

It was an address replete with pointed epigrams and scathing retort. Referring to the alleged Democrats who are leaving the party Mr. Hearst said:

"We are not sorry to see them go; we are home cleaning in order to make them go.

He paid his respects once more to Alton B. Parker when he designated as a political cockroach.

H. H. Rogers was designated as a "rat" and Mr. Jerome's political career as "bug."

The audience howled its delight at the sallies of Mr. Hearst and kept them almost constantly in cheers.

Jackson Demands Recount.

Mr. Jackson, Mr. Shearn, Congressman Lamar and Mr. Whalen spoke earlier in the evening. It was the first appearance of Mr. Jackson since his nomination and his reception from his fellow-townsmen was flattering.

Mr. Jackson seized upon the occasion to declare in favor of the recount of the ballot cast at the municipal election, which the Republican attorney-general ordered. During the meeting Miss Katherine Miley sang the "Good Old U. S. A." and James Meutinge's song, "Waiting for the Votes" was sung by the entire crowd, led by John J. Nester.

Congressman Lamar was the first speaker. He was followed by Mr. Jackson, who was in turn followed by Mr. Shearn.

Wild Cheering for Hearst.

It was ten minutes of ten when Mr. Hearst arrived. "Three cheers for Hearst, the man who is going to save the State," was the greeting he received and the cheering then continued until the enthusiasm was finally drowned out by the band. Upon the conclusion of Mr. Hearst's address he was greeted unanimously. The crowd followed him to his carriage, and ran after it for several blocks, before Mr. Hearst successfully made his escape.

Tendered Great Reception.

Prior to the meeting this evening, Mr. Hearst was tendered a reception at the Iroquois Hotel, at which he shook hands with several thousands of his Buffalo supporters. Democratic State Chairman Connors and John Collins, chairman of the Independence League of Buffalo received with him.

DEMOCRATS ARE CLEANING HOUSE, SAYS MR. HEARST

Mr. Hearst's speech was as follows:

"My Friends: I spoke in Salem, Ill., at the former residence of Abraham Lincoln, on political independence. I said that if a very large proportion of the people voted blindly for one party or the other, the control of government is really left in the hands of a small minority, working incessantly for its own interest and without regard for the public welfare.

In New York, we have seen the insurance swindlers contribute to the Democratic party one year and to the Republican party the next. We know that Ryan and Rockefeller and Morgan and Belmont have no party prejudices but conduct their politics for their own pocket and according to the maxims laid down by Jay Gould. Mr. Gould said before an investigating committee:

"When I am dealing with the Republicans, I am a Republican; when I am dealing with the Democrats I am a Democrat. When a district is doubtful, I am doubtful, and all the time I am an Erie Railroad man."

I do not think there is any doubt in this campaign where the Ryans and Rockefellers, the Morgans, the Rogerses, the Rockefellers, stand, and where the campaign contributions will go.

All for Corporation Candidate.

The representatives of the corporations have all declared for the corporation candidate of the corporation party. All the paid political agitators, all their hired attorneys, their subsidized newspapers, have declared for the corporations' candidate of the corporation party.

All the so-called Democratic Republicans of the political speculators of Wall street have packed their bags with their turned coats, and their corporation collars, and have stepped over across the way to the so-called Republican establishment.

And my friends, I am heartily glad to see them go. All that were hesitating about going, I have managed to give a little push in order to help them make up their minds according to the old adage, their room is better than their company, and their absence was proper to fill and fitted to fill with Lincoln Republicans, loyal laboring men, sincere citizens who prefer an American government by the people for the public's good to a corporation government for private profit and public plunder.

The Independence League and the Democratic party are house-cleaning, and out of every dark hole and dirty corner come political cockroaches and corporation croton bugs, and warty old rats of Wall street that swarm into the Republican establishment next door.

We are not sorry to see them go. We are housecleaning in order to make them go, and they go because they hate the bright light of publicity and the pure air of honest.

No sooner had the Democratic disinfectant been sprinkled in the nooks and crannies of our political edifice than Judge Parker scrambled out of his corporation corner and scuttled into the corporation's establishment across the way.

I have described Judge Parker as a typical corporation attorney, a man who can be feed to hold any opinion on any subject or argue any side of any case, the attorney who, in the election cases appeared for the election criminals in the court where he had formerly sat as chief justice, and there argued against the decision he had formerly rendered and succeeded in securing a reversal of his own verdict.

And he did this because the corporations that employed him wanted him to do it and paid him to do it.

Not Denial; a Confession.

Judge Parker has replied to this statement by the assertion that he did not receive any money from the corporations representing the election criminals. He calls that a denial; I call it a confession.

He received no money from McClellan, but he does receive $50,000 a year as attorney for the Equitable interests, and as attorney for those corporations therefore he appeared in defence of McClellan and the election thieves of 1901.

I am glad we have driven this political cockroach from under the sink into the legal laundry where the soiled clothes are washed in the corporation establishment across the way.

H. H. Rogers of the Standard Oil Company has declared in an interview that he does not believe it will be possible for Hearst to win in New York as Hearst would not serve sufficiently well the large business interests.

Mr. Rogers is one of the principals or confederates in the guilty Standard Oil system that has lately been so thoroughly exposed and is now being prosecuted by the government. That system has been the most powerful financial power in the country by criminal evasion of the law, and it more successfully than any other has dominated in our public life than all the other evil influences in politics.

I shall be glad to promote the proper interests of all legitimate business men, of whom I am one, and the proper interests of laboring men and farmers and professional men, but most emphatically I will not serve the large business that Mr. Rogers represents.

And I am glad that this particular rat has been driven out of the cleanest out house into underground passages of the corporation establishment across the way.

No sooner had the Democratic Rough-on-Rats began to have its effects than Charles A. Towne scurried across the floor and out of the Democratic door.

Mortgaged to Corporations.

He is a man who has mortgaged himself to the corporations. His expressions, therefore, are merely the expressions of his corporation masters. His real opinions are in pawn.

He is not the "Spotless town" that you have read about in the advertisements, but a spotted Towne that changes his spots with every election. He began as a Republican, went over to the Populists, became a Free Silver Democrat, then a Tammany Democrat and now is blushing speedily back in the Republican rat hole where he belongs.

Jerome is another political chaton bug that is trying to crawl into the corporation establishment across the way, against the frantic protests of respectable Republicans. He goes where Ryan goes, for in the words of the poet: "Big flies have little flies upon their backs to bite them, and little flies have smaller flies and so ad infinitum." And with Ryan goes Paul Cravath, ex-partner of Chauncey Ryan, corporation counsel and political parasite. A year ago Mr. Cravath organized Ryan and stood sponsor for Jerome. This year he has scrubbed Ryan, but Jerome remains and there represents Mr. Ryan and stands sponsor for Mr. Ryan.

House Thoroughly Cleaned.

My friends, we have cleaned our house thoroughly and effectively, and I think we have made it a wholesome residence for Democrats and Republicans alike. I congratulate the convention that was held in this city upon its refusal to be the agents of corporation and for declaration for Democratic principles, and I think the people are clearly drawn to those who are in favor of special privileges and those who are in favor of popular rights.

The candidates of the Independence League and of the Democratic party are definitely pledged to the issues expressed in the platform, and I have endeavored in my personal platform and letter of acceptance to state my views clearly and express my promise in a most definite and positive manner.

Equal Opportunity for All.

I believe in an impartial enforcement of the laws that exist; I believe in independence in politics for the public good. I believe in open opportunity for all men and that the distribution of wealth is as important as the creation of wealth. I believe in labor unions and farmers' granges and organizations that promote the distribution of wealth. I realize that the prosperity of the legitimate business man depends upon the purchasing power of the people.

I believe that American labor should be protected against Chinese labor and the entering wedge of oriental conditions; I believe in placing the control of the government directly in the hands of the American people; I believe in direct nominations and open primaries, in purity in politics and a free ballot, and a fair count.

Honest Primary Laws.

And I advise that every one take on any ticket, Democratic, Republican or Independent, be pledged to work for, and have power to force, honest primary and election laws in order that the people may be able to choose their own candidates, and have their votes counted as cast.

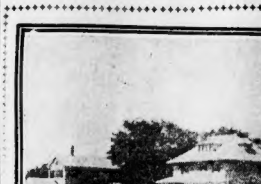
I am sometimes asked by well-meaning people if I really intend to carry out my promises. I do not blame them for doubting, as they have been deceived often and so outrageously. But let me call their attention to this definite and undeniable fact.

Mr. Ryan and Mr. Belmont, Mr. Morgan and Mr. Rockefeller, have never made a promise that, question, for they know I am going to carry out my promises and that is the reason why that every newspaper on their payroll, every corporation lawyer in their employ or on their ticket, every corporation henchman in their hire, is opposing me.

Captain Kidds of Industry.

But I am proud of the opposition of these Captain Kidds of industry. There is only one thing I value more than their opposition and that is your confidence and the confidence of all the honorable American citizens whom I seek to serve.

REFUSES $2,500 OFFER FOR LAND WHICH HE SNAPPED UP AT $250



IDEAL HOME SPOT IN LEXINGTON, WHERE LAND VALUES HAVE JUMPED.

Wage-Earners Find Way to Prosperity in Real Estate Field of Greater Boston—This Deal Was Made Three Years Ago.

A Boston man has just refused $2,500 for a lot of land which he bought three years ago for $250.

The offer was made through a prominent firm of real estate brokers, and is only one of many offers of equal amounts on similar investments.

The land happened to be in Lexington. The place does not really matter, of course, for the specific instance is cited merely to awaken residents of Greater Boston to the opportunity that lies before them in the field of real estate. In this particular case the man who sold the land had bought it out of his wages. He paid $20 down, in the records of the brokers, and a dollar a month thereafter. He did not miss the money, and yet he finally came to own some 12,000 square feet of land that no one could take away from him. Finally, again, he could have sold out on the deal for over $2,000 profit.

His Security in Land.

Perhaps some day he will sell out for three thousand dollars profit. But in any event, two thousand dollars is a wage-earner, accrued by simply waiting three years, would be a very material and welcome addition to the salary of any wage-earner. Your imagination can tell you what his security in the event of his individual referred to had bought two lots, or three lots, or ten lots.

The case of this man is cited in pursuance of the wish of the BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN to have the people of Greater Boston and New England realize the splendid merit of investments in real estate. As districts become more and more settled, land must increase in value. Meanwhile, it remains the safest security on earth, because it is of the earth itself. This commonplace is stated because many Bostonians still do not realize this fact. The instances already given in preceding issues of this newspaper were published, furthermore, for the very reason of that lack of realization. Others may be cited in the future, for land can be recommended as an investment as long as paper and ink and type are procurable.

Better Than 700 Per Cent.

As already stated, the land deal which would have netted better than 700 per cent. profit occurred in Lexington. A description of the place is given here to enhance the value of the instance, as names, for reasons easily to be understood, cannot well be given.

A little over twenty years ago, at the time of the death of the Hon. Francis B. Hayes, a son of that distinguished corporation lawyer came into possession of a large tract of land in Lexington. Originally it had comprised several farms, which the elder Mr. Hayes had accumulated since 1800, always adding to his purchases up to the time he died. There were in the estate about a dozen farms. The division fences and walls were taken down, for the estates were contiguous, and one-half of the land was converted into a park, the other half into a model farm. The park was planted with trees brought from all parts of the world. A special trip was made to Europe and an immense number of trees and shrubs was brought from that country by the owner.

During Mr. Hayes's life, and after his death, when the property was still in the possession of the heirs, the park was open to the public. A feature of especial interest was a magnificent statue of a minute man, portrayed in life-like manner as on that April day, 1775, when the first revolutionary days when Lexington as a battleground was the first scene in the war drama whose climax was the freedom of the United States of America.

Harvest for Investors.

The son who inherited the land died some years ago, and the property was in litigation in the courts for several years afterwards. Two trustees of the estate were finally appointed, Augustus P. Loring and William Allen Hayes. The son had left the land to a charitable institution, which was unable to hold it, that is, some 150 acres of it, and was given into the hands of the Edward T. Harrington Company, as brokers, for sale. About thirty acres of the land had been bought by a millionaire brewer, who is now in Germany. Here is one of those great risks—and gains—in the country, and when they were in bloom people traveled miles to see them.

When the spirit of commercialism finally pervaded the management of the estate, the land was divided into lots. It then became known as Oakmont Park. The trustees declared that most of the lots could be sold in a year's time. Every one of them was sold within a few weeks. That was three years ago, and nearly every lot has been closely held since then. One offer, which was refused, has been stated. Only ten lots have been bought for $500, was sold recently for $1,100. Another, bought at the same price, was sold at $1,600—and so on. The lots varied in size between 12,000 and 50,000 square feet. Their prices ranged from $350 to $500. To this day, no lot has gone by default, and many persons have sold at enough profit to double their holdings of land.

Profit Not in Judgment.

The 150 acres were worth about $50 each, or $7,500, twenty years ago. Divided into house lots, three years ago they were sold for about $78,000. If all the lots were sold to-day they would bring at least $150,000. That is how this tract of land has appreciated in value. Whether or not a lot of this land is offered for sale it is safe to say that those who have had an order for it placed with his brokers for a long time. They have been sales and resales. The land has steadily appreciated, though, in the varying periods of years.

All these details are given not so much to illustrate what has been done in the matter of property as to what is happening to real estate in general. Not only does it provide a home—the inalienable tenure of living which every man wants, at the bottom of his heart—but it is the place of a purely business venture for purposes of profit. If one owns lands, one has it. One also has an asset that will increase in value, as surely as the earth will revolve through the succeeding seasons, and the sun and rain will enrich it for the benefit of nature and man.

Judgment as to where to buy, based especially on where people will want to live, is necessary. But, first of all, buy. The good judgment will make the profit. The profit, however, naturally must supplement the good judgment.

BRADFORD OUT AS A CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR.

"State Government Reform" Is His Shibboleth, and He Proposes to Stump the Commonwealth for the Votes

Gamaliel Bradford of Wellesley and Brookline announces his candidacy for Governor. His platform is combined in one sentence, "State government reform."

Mr. Bradford has been all kinds of Democrat in the past ten years, one time opposing Bryan because he was for free silver and again favoring him because he opposed imperialism.

Mr. Bradford refuses to support either Governor Guild or John B. Moran, and says he has assurances of receiving enough signatures to his nomination papers to give him a place on the ballot.

Speaking of Governor Guild he asks the pertinent question: "What has he done?" He answers it by saying:

"He has left as little trace of his official term as a vessel makes in passing through the water; he has done just what every other Governor has done in the last fifteen years, and now, on the prospect of a second term, he has not one word to say as to the great problems of State affairs pressing for solution.

"I ask for a platform, beyond a general laudation of the beneficence of Republican rule, that contains little except a defense of all the gross absurdities which it contains."

Mr. Bradford intends to stump the State and his official designation on the ballot will be "State Government Reform."

GARDNER ADMITS HE HAS A HARD ROW TO HOE.

Ipswich, Oct. 6.—The Republicans of the Sixth District renominated Augustus P. Gardner for Congress for a third term at their convention here to-day. In accepting the honor the Congressman said:

"I realize that I have a harder fight ahead than in 1904. I hope to win, and I hope you will not think me immodest if I say I expect to win.

"In my opinion the manufacturers who demand unrestricted immigration in order to obtain a supply of cheap labor are wrong. I do not propose to make my efforts to restrict the millions of newcomers who tend constantly to break down the rate of Americanism.

"On the other hand, I believe that Mr. Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, is wrong in some of his demands. In spite of this criticism, I have no apologies to make for my vote to exempt foreigners working on the Panama canal from the operation of our national eight-hour law."

AFRAID TO ALLOW GUILD TO GO ON STUMP.

Governor Guild's attitude toward the Overtime bill—shown by his making a juror of Senator Dana, who defeated that measure for the protection of women and children—is so offensive to the rank and file of Massachusetts voters that the State committee is disinclined to have him go on the stump and be asked to explain his action face to face with citizens.

"Official dignity," is the excuse given by a newspaper organ for keeping him off the stump. It says:

"Governor Guild will not make a stumping tour of the State. Of course, the dignity of his office militates against that. But there is a great demand to hear him from all over the State, and the demand for rallies everywhere, so that he will speak probably only at a few times."

The work of explaining may be left to the stump Attorney-General Moody is one of the others.

Six Questions for Guild to Answer

These questions are asked Governor Guild by voters:

Why did you appoint President William F. Dana of the Senate to the Superior Court bench?

Why did you seek the defeat of the overtime bill? Was President Dana's appointment a reward for his vote against it?

Why did you appoint as judges men who had no judicial experience and did not have the approval of a majority of the members of the bar?

What induced you to appoint Ezra H. Baker as chairman of the Excise Board, when, as president of the Mattapan Trust Company, he comes in contact with liquor dealers as depositors?

Why did you approve of an extension of the Elevated system in the business section of the city against the protest of the business men?

Why did you approve of gas legislation urged by the Gas Trust?

BERMUDIAN FLOATED.

New York, Oct. 6.—The steamer Bermudian, which went aground in New York harbor yesterday while bound in from Bermuda, was floated to-day. She proceeded at once to her pier.
